Top Official Shuffled, Pay Cut

A top-level provincial civil service official has been moved to a lower-paying position as part of an internal rearrangement of the provincial lands department.

As part of a shuffle announced Monday by Resources Minister Bob Williams, David Borthwick will take a pay cut of $3,000, to $25,000 a year, as a special adviser to the lands branch.

His replacement as deputy associate minister is Norman Pearson, who will receive $33,000 a year, up from the $22,740 he received as Williams' staff consultant.

Wayne Richards, former publisher of a Kitsilano community newspaper, will take over as staff consultant at $21,516 a year and Stewart Headley, a PNE director and long-time NDP member, will become Williams' administrative assistant at $17,628 a year.

Borthwick said he could not comment on his new position, other than to say he will be doing special work.

The shuffle, he said, is "just part of the re-structuring in the department."

In 1970, John de Wolf, then leader of the provincial Conservative party, charged that Borthwick had a conflict of interest because he was a member of a mining promotion syndicate, which included top officials of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources, involved in the controversy over development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver.

De Wolf said Borthwick signed an agreement on behalf of the government leasing land in the Cypress Bowl area to Alpine, with one of his mining associates signing for the company.

Williams said today the Cypress Bowl controversy "wasn't a factor" in the decision to shift Borthwick.

"We're simply reorganizing the lands branch and the man that is the new associate deputy has a background in the area that's needed in terms of the new direction the department is taking," said Williams.

Asked why Borthwick has received a salary cut, Williams said his new position is a "less demanding job."

Pearson, 36, is a community and regional planner and has worked for the government for two years. He is past president of the Planning Institute of B.C. and former editor of the Town Planning Institute of Canada Newsletter.

Along with the new appointments, Williams announced several "new directions" for the lands service.

He said the service will place greater emphasis on working with other departments in sorting out "conflicting demands and future uses on Crown lands."

New methods of co-ordinating government land purchases will be investigated and a stepped-up program on the use of greenbelt lands, ecological reserves and appropriate Crown lands for recreation, education and research.

The "out-moded and time consuming Crown land leasing process" will be shifted to a new program, said Williams, and there will be greater realization of the development potential of Crown lands.

Only McGeer Left

By late this morning the legislative clerk's office had still not received financial disclosure forms from Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey).

Officials who do not comply with the new disclosures act are subject to summary conviction with a maximum $10,000 fine but Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today he did not want to comment on any action that might be taken against officials who did not meet with Monday's disclosure deadline.

"I would hope that any recording clerk would inform anybody in default and there's probably a reason for these delays," he said.

A spokesman for the clerk's office said McGeer had telephoned this morning to say he had mailed his disclosure Thursday evening in Vancouver.

A disclosure return from NDP MLA Hartley Dent (Skeena), missing earlier, turned up in the mail this morning. Dent's form was marked "nil" holdings to disclose on all five sheets.

Official deadline for filing disclosures was Sept. 15 but officers were accepting disclosures all day Monday the 16th.

Bus, Truck Set Alight In Port Hardy Strike

An old truck and bus blocking entrance to the Utah International copper mine at Port Hardy were burned by arsonists Monday night as the six-week-old strike escalated into violence.

The burning culminated a day of violence on the picket line in which one man was cut in a fight involving three pickets and member of the mine supervisory staff who crossed the line.

The company blockaded the road with the bus and truck when rumors spread that strikers might enter the mine property and try to halt all work.

Pickets blocked both main roads into the mine with about 100 cars today but they were outside company property.

Trouble came to a head Monday when a member of the mine supervisory staff, Dick Robertson, successfully crossed a picket line one mile outside the mine and then was involved in a taunting match with picketers.

Witnesses said a fight broke out and picketer Dan Ludwigson received a three-inch cut.

"There was a lot of punching and kicking," the witness said. "There was blood all over the road."

Ludwigson was treated in hospital and released.

At 2:30 p.m. a cavalcade of 70 cars of workers came to the picket line and blockaded the road, preventing supervisory personnel from leaving by the shorter main road into Port Hardy. They left by a back road.

The employees said they were trying to force the company to resume negotiations. The blockade was removed at 8 p.m. when the company said it would listen to any suggestions from a mediator appointed by the provincial government as to how negotiations could be resumed. The mediator was talking to both sides today but talks had not resumed by noon.

Meanwhile, the company, reacting to rumors that pickets might enter the company property to disrupt work, moved an old bus up against a flatbed two-ton truck to block entrance to the mine.

At 9:15 p.m. a person or persons unknown set fire to the bus and truck, completely gutting the interior of both vehicles, RCMP spokesmen said.

"The fires were deliberately set and we are investigating further," the RCMP office said.

No charges had been laid by noon today.

There was no work at the mine today because both the mine front road and the longer rear road were blocked by workers' cars, the RCMP said.

Dollar value of the bus and truck was said to be negligible as both vehicles were very old. The 40-seat bus was used to transport employees around the mine but was not used frequently.

The bus-truck blockade was set up 200 yards outside the main entrance to the mine. The picket line was another 1,200 yards down the road.

The strike began when 35 members of local 115-C of Office and Technical Employees walked out seeking a first contract with the mine

DOG KILLS RABBITS

Graham Lake arrived home from work Monday to find the mangled bodies of 14 rabbits he had been raising for food strewn around his backyard.

They had been killed by a marauding dog.

His wife said today, had their two young children been in the yard at the time, they too might have been attacked by the dog.

At 8 a.m. a neighbor and her young son reported seeing a large German shepherd dog leaving the driveway of the Lakes' home at 2963 Cedar Hill, one of the rabbits still in his mouth.

"We were in the house at the time," she said. "It was a large black and gold dog. He must have been in a real frenzy.

"Had the children seen him going for the rabbits they would have rushed out to save them and who knows what would have happened them?"

She said two of the rabbits killed were does, one expecting a litter some time next week.

"The others were all ready for the freezer," she said.

Mrs. Lake said she and her husband had been raising rabbits for 10 years, building the cages in the same manner as those that were broken into Monday.

Lake told the Times, "When a dog in the city can get so vicious it's a threat to the city. I'm afraid to let my kids go out in the yard."

Both he and his wife said it was high time the city bylaw on straying dogs was enforced.

She said she had little hope that the dog's owners can be

$1,000 BIKER REWARD

The father of missing Duncan motorcyclist Lothar Doliwa has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the location of his 23-year-old son.

Lothar was last heard from early July 28 when he apparently drove to his parents' home and then suddenly left.

Copper Price Drops

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The price of copper has fallen sharply to about 60 cents a pound, considered to be the break-even level for many British Columbia mines, the Mining Association of B.C. said today.

Copper was selling at 84 cents a pound July 11 and was as high as $1.40 a pound within the last 12 months. It was quoted in the range of 59-61 today.

"This does not mean that a lot of mines will suddenly be closing but it does mean trouble on the horizon if the price goes lower and stays there for an extended period of time," said P. R. Matthew, secretary-manager of the association.

He said B.C. mines generally made good profits during the past 12 months but tough times have returned and there is no prospect of a turnaround for at least a year.

Supply of copper is increasing faster than the demand because of recessions in Europe, North America and Japan and the price likely will be depressed for at least 12 months, he said.

Conditions vary at each mine but the most recent estimate is that a large number of B.C. operations require a price of at least 60 cents a pound to keep up with inflation, pay increased labor costs and for depreciation of plants.

Copper accounts for half of B.C.'s mineral production being worth $500 million in 1973.

Matthew said regardless of the fact mines may be losing money for the rest of the year, they will have to continue to pay a 2.5 per cent provincial production royalty until Dec. 31 and then begin paying a 5 per cent royalty in 1975.

The province also collects a 50 per cent royalty on windfall profits and in practice this means when the price of copper rises above 85 cents a pound. It has been below that level since July 11.

Provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick has suggested he might alter the mine tax formula to encourage new mines to go into production but there would be no relief for existing mines.

Alteration of the formula could take the form of a system whereby the 50 per cent royalty applied on copper priced considerably above 85 cents a pound.

U.S. Senate to Probe Perjury, CIA Chile Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee decided unanimously today to investigate secret disruptive activities by the Central Intelligence Agency in Chile.

Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho), announced the committee decision, saying the study would help determine what course of action to take toward officials who may have perjured themselves in 1973 when they testified that the U.S. had not intervened in Chile against Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The decision came after a Senate staff report recommended that a perjury investigation be initiated against former Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms and accused Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of having "deceived" the Senate foreign relations committee in sworn testimony.

The confidential report, which centres on testimony given by high-ranking officials on U.S. covert intervention in Chile's internal political affairs, also recommends perjury and contempt investigations of three other government witnesses in the Chile inquiry: former assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs Charles E. Meyer, former U.S. ambassador to Chile Edward Korry and William Broe, former chief of the CIA's Latin American division.

The report, submitted to subcommittee chairman Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho,) and Clifford P. Case, (Rep-N.J.), also asks that the record of Kissinger's confir-

Junior Highs Inadequate—Parents

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A majority of parents think junior high schools aren't doing an adequate job, a study of Greater Victoria high schools states.

The study, done by Dr. Christopher Hodgkinson of the University of Victoria, shows 52 per cent of parents surveyed found junior high schools inadequate.

Forty-four per cent of teachers also found junior highs performing inadequately, while 59 per cent of students and 64 per cent of school administrators thought they were doing a good job.

"Parents are the most dissatisfied of the four groups studied," says Hodgkinson's report.

"Aggrieved parents see the schools as a sort of 'Greater Funland' where all is permitted and permissive.

"There are too many field trips; not enough hard work; not enough homework; teachers are afraid to be strict; there is not enough structure; discipline is poor . . .

"A sizeable proportion of parents are manifestly opposed to what they perceive as modern trends.

"Whether in reaction or from nostalgia they would like to see a revision of the work ethic of yesteryear. At least for their children."

Teachers' main criticism of junior high schools was levelled at elementary schools that supply students to the junior highs, said the report.

"It was felt that . . . students were overprotected and overpromoted. They arrived immature and unable to cope with responsibility and choice until they reached the level of Grade 10.

"The skills of literacy and numeracy were neglected. In short, the buck was passed to the junior secondary school."

Ninety per cent of administrators, 72 per cent of parents and 64 per cent of teachers viewed discipline as a major problem. Most students, 64 per cent, did not.

A sizeable proportion of all four groups thought Grade 10 students should be part of the senior high school, not the junior high.

"Some girls would like Grade 10 moved up since this would improve dating prospects," said the report.

The study found many students were very happy with the school system as it stands, and even appreciative of it.

"Most of them in fact liked things the way they are, they liked the variety of offerings in the curriculum, the teachers, the science courses, the industrial education courses, the general school climate."

Opinions of students and administrators, and those of teachers and parents, tended to be closest together.

A hospital spokesman said surgery "went fine" and listed Bonner's condition as satisfactory but would give no further information.

No announcement has been made as to whether Bonner will be well enough to pursue his plans to chair a Social Credit Party resolutions seminar at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 26-27.

"His condition is fairly serious," his wife said. "How serious is something they are going to find out. He . . . will be in at least a week."

A hospital spokesman said surgery "went fine" and listed Bonner's condition as satisfactory but would give no further information.

No announcement has been made as to whether Bonner will be well enough to pursue his plans to chair a Social Credit Party resolutions seminar at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 26-27.

Ford Links Pardon, Nixon Guilt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford says Richard Nixon's acceptance of a pardon "can be construed" as an admission of guilt for Watergate crimes and the former president has been "shamed and disgraced" by his forced resignation.

Vigorously defending the pardon, but admitting surprise at the antagonism it created, Ford said he acted to spare the nation further turmoil and division.

He said there was "no understanding, no deal . . . none whatsoever" between him and Nixon.

The president's half hour televised news conference Monday night in the east room was dominated by questions about the pardon. He insisted that "in this very, very difficult situation, I made the right decision."

"Let me say very strongly the United States is not going to have a depression," he told his news conference. "The over-all economy of the United States is strong."

In foreign affairs, Ford acknowledged that the United States secretly intervened in Chile to assist opposition newspapers and political factions, but he denied the CIA was involved in the coup that overthrew Chilean president Salvadore Allende. He said the intervention was "in the best interests of Chile and our country," and said other powers do the same. He would not say whether it was legal under international law.

Ford disclosed that "within the next few days a very major decision will be taken on increasing U.S. food contributions for humanitarian purposes to help foreign countries suffering from drought and poor harvests."

On the question of Watergate tapes, whose ownership by Nixon Ford affirmed in a special agreement, the president said: "I believe that they have been properly preserved and they will be available under subpoena for any criminal proceeding."

The tapes will be kept in joint custody of Nixon and the general services administration for five years, after which Nixon will gain sole control.

Ford said the office of special prosecutor Leon Jaworski has expressed "some concern" over this agreement. Jaworski was not consulted when it was made. Ford said his staff has been meeting with Jaworski's to iron out "any concerns."

Ford rejected any comparison between his full pardon of Nixon and the conditional amnesty he offered earlier in the day to war resisters, except that both involved attempts to heal "wounds."

On other points, Ford:

—Disclosed he would issue an executive order soon to tighten regulations governing the handling of and access to confidential income tax returns held by the internal revenue service and supported legislation with a similar aim now before Congress.

—Said he expects to announce successors soon for Gen. Alexander Haig, who is leaving his post as chief of staff to become NATO supreme commander, and J. FeterHorst, his press secretary who resigned over the pardon decision.

MERCHANDISE TRADE SLUMPS

OTTAWA (CP) — A deficit of $259 million was recorded for the second quarter as the balance of merchandise trade slumped to its lowest level since the third quarter of 1972, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Figures are adjusted to account for seasoned variations.

The volume of merchandise exports dropped by almost five per cent during the quarter and imports were down by one per cent. The value of merchandise trade was higher but this was due to price inflation.

In recent years a surplus in merchandise trade and a more than offsetting deficit in service transactions — such items as foreign travel, interest and dividends — has been the pattern.

The over-all deficit for the first quarter was $218 million and there has been an over-all deficit for nine of the last 10 quarters. The surplus came in the second quarter of 1973 and it was $68 million over-all.

For trade only, the surplus for the second quarter this year was $401 million, compared with trade surpluses $607 million in the first quarter and $682 million in the second quarter of last year.

On the capital account side — securities investments — there was a net gain of $25 million in direct investment in Canada and a net reduction of $160 million in investments abroad by Canadians.

Accounting for all movements of capital, there was a net inflow of $365 million in the second quarter compared with an inflow of $925 in the first quarter this year.

Long-term investments were reduced by $85 million in the second quarter and it was the first time since the second quarter of 1971 that there was a net reduction in long-term transactions.

Barrier Removed On Egg Imports From U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has temporarily lifted restrictions on U.S. egg imports, the agriculture department announced Monday.

Since U.S. prices are currently higher than those in Canada, the move will probably have little effect on consumer prices.

The restrictions, imposed last May in an effort to protect domestic egg men against low priced American imports, were removed because egg production in the U.S. has dropped, raising prices in that country.

The restrictions were imposed under federal changes in the Import and Export Permits Act, which allows the government to block entry of any food product that threatens to undercut domestic prices.

Federal marketing experts said the curbs can be "safely" removed now because the U.S. egg futures market indicates continually rising prices in that country.

As a result, they said, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency can go ahead and raise its price for eggs with no worries about U.S. competition.

The restrictions, which still apply to turkey imports, are determined under an elaborate formula based on prices here and in the U.S.

They were imposed last May because the government said prices in the U.S. — between 24 and 25 cents a dozen — were abnormally low. Although only a small portion of egg production in either country moves across the border, extremely low prices in the U.S. have a tendency to drag down Canadian prices.

The restrictions could be reimposed quickly if American prices became competitive.

A-G Office Site Up to Judiciary

Allocation of office space in the new addition to Victoria's Law Courts building "will only be decided after consultation with the judiciary," Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today.

Asked about criticism levelled at the government for announcing that offices of the attorney general's department would be placed in the new addition, this mixing the law making and law enforcement sectors in one building, Macdonald said if the judiciary "don't want our department we will go somewhere else and let someone else go in there."

He said, however, he suspects new courtroom and related facilities will quickly take over most of the 29,000 additional square feet of space the new addition will contain.

The $1.68 million two-storey addition to the building at the corner of Burdettt and Blanshard is expected to be completed within two years.

held liable for the dog's actions.

"The SPCA told me that unless we could catch him the first day with fur in his mouth and were able to prove it nothing much can be done."

She said Don Adams, SPCA inspector had "suspicions" on which dog it could be but could not prove it.

Adams conceded, from the general description, it could be a large dog about which complaints had been laid before.

But, Adams said, he had gone to the home of the suspect dog's owners twice Monday — at 9:30 a.m. and 4.45 p.m. and again today. Each time the owners, both of whom work, and the dog were not there.

Adams said the problem in enforcing the bylaw was lack of funds for the necessary staff. The city of Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt pay the SPCA for pound duties while Saanich operates its own pound system.

"I don't blame the city," he said, "They have a hell of a tough job to do They only pay for one man to patrol from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. How can one man patrol an entire city?"

Adams said the SPCA "can't get the city to come up with the money."

As a Saanich resident, Adams said he felt he wasn't receiving adequate pound service, either, but more service in any municipality would mean an increase in property taxes.

Before he joined the SPCA Adams was a professional rabbit breeder in a co-operative. He now raises game birds as a hobby.

The co-operative he said raised rabbits for the meat market, using a building that would keep out animals and disease.

This would be impractical and too expensive for people raising rabbits for their own consumption on a small scale Adams said.

He recommended, however, that rabbit-raisers erect fences, about three feet high, that would screen them from the view of dogs. He also recommended the cages be at least four feet from the ground.

SPCA inspector Hugh Dyer agreed rabbits raised in urban areas had to have special protection.

"The best of dogs will kill rabbits," he said, "I don't care what kind he is."

Perjury Probe

mation hearing be re-opened in public session to question the secretary on the "rationale" for U.S. covert political actions in Chile after 1969.

It further recommended that Kissinger be asked to testify generally on U.S. policy toward "duly elected governments which may be anticipated not to follow policies to the liking of the United States."

Meanwhile at a press conference Monday night President Ford defended U.S. operations in Chile and said they were designed to preserve the opposition press and political parties after the 1970 election of the late Salvador Allende.

State department and White House spokesmen were unable, however, to amplify on the president's assertion that the Allende government attempted, after its accession, "to destroy opposition news media . . . and to destroy opposition political parties."

Ford said that the covert program was "in the best interests of the people in Chile and certainly in our best interest.

"I am not going to pass judgment on whether it is permitted or authorized under international law. It is a recognized fact that historically and presently such actions are taken in the best interest of the countries involved."

At the time of Allende's overthrow and death on Sept. 11, 1973, some 10 major newspapers covering the entire political spectrum nearly two dozen radio stations and all major political parties were operating in Chile.

The military junta which ousted him from power terminated operations of all political parties and permitted only pro-government newspapers to resume publication. The Chilean congress, which ratified Allende's election in 1970, was also closed.

Both White House and state department spokesmen said they had "no guidance" on the president's explanation for the initiation of the programs in Chile, which involved some $11 million in covert funds.

BUSINESS AND THE CONSUMER

A prepaid consumer contract inquiry will be held in the near future. Its purpose is to examine prepaid consumer contracts and in particular the activities of health spas, reducing salons, magazine subscription sales, dance studios, food distribution schemes, record and tape clubs, other mail order schemes, and house repair contractors.

Interested persons from the business community and the general public are invited to attend meetings to be held in Greater Vancouver, Prince George, Kamloops, Castlegar, Victoria and the other centres if necessary. Watch your newspaper for an announcement of meetings in your area. If you think that you may have information of value to the Inquiry and are willing to speak to its members, please contact:

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Charges Dismissed Against AIM Chiefs

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — American Indian Movement (AIM) leaders Dennis Banks and Russell Means have won dismissals in the major test case of the 71-day Wounded Knee occupation, although the United States government may appeal the decision.

But Means and Banks weren't worried about an appeal as Banks stood on a table in a hotel room, balancing a cake in each hand Monday night.

The scene was a stark contrast to the dusty, flat, grazing land of the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota where AIM members and sympathizers resisted U.S. marshals in the spring of 1973.

About 200 persons, half of them white, celebrated with the two AIM leaders, including four jurors who had earlier said they would have voted to acquit the pair if they'd had the chance.

But in a slashing attack on "government misconduct," U.S. District Judge Fred Nichol dismissed the charges against Banks, 42, and Means, 35, ending the eight-month trial.

Nichol said at one point: "This has been a bad year for justice. I would like to see a new chapter written with a new president. But I'm afraid that isn't so."

He acted after the justice department refused to allow jury deliberations to continue after one juror, Therese Cherrier, suffered a stroke which left her partially paralysed.

Federal court procedure requires the approval of both sides before a jury may continue deliberations with one or more jurors missing.

The defendants had hoped for an acquittal to pave the way for wiping out charges against all other Wounded Knee defendants, now numbering about 90.

The two AIM leaders were tagged by federal prosecutors as the key figures in a seven-man leadership that allegedly steered the armed takeover of the South Dakota hamlet last year.

Russell Means, Dennis Banks celebrate

Nichol stopped short of acquittal. Instead, his dismissal allows the government to appeal within 30 days.

"In my opinion the department of justice should have sought justice in this case by permitting it to go to the jury rather than deny that justice because they refused to accept the unanimous verdict of an 11 member jury," Nichol said.

The judge said that in keeping witness Louis Moves Camp in protective custody, two FBI agents put him up in a "plush resort" near Hudson, Wis., "let him have all the liquor he wanted and they were doing a pretty fair job of trying to keep up with him."

Ads, Not Grapes, Banned

Despite the wrath of the head of organized labor in B.C., the provincial government will not carry ads for a California-grape boycott on its buses.

Leen Guy, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor has accused B.C. Hydro of violating "the most fundamental principle of freedom of speech" in not allowing the ads to appear.

Resources Minister Bob Williams, government spokesman on the issue, said today the contract Hydro has with its ad agency states that political or controversial display cards cannot be placed on buses.

It is not a matter of government policy, he said, it is simply a question of honoring an existing contract "which has some time to run."

The minister said the government does not plan to interfere with the advertising contract and added that once bus ads "get closer into the political realm," buses would be filled with competing displays.

Gorge Union Patient

Employees at Gorge Road Hospital represented by the Hospital Employees Union will wait a month to see if a number of issues with management are ironed out, a union spokesman said today.

Bill Muir, local representative for HEU, said there was a three-hour meeting with hospital management Monday which was reported to two membership meetings Monday evening.

"We've decided there will be no action taken for one month," he said.

But a notice of motion was served at Monday's union meetings to review the situation at the next regular meeting Oct. 17.

The union said last week there are 14 issues, including failure to pay premium rates for certain statutory holidays, failure to pay certain retroactive money and not recognizing the union as the sole collective bargaining agent but dealing with employees individually. The hospital described the charges then as "patently ridiculous."

MARGARET IN HOSPITAL

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau, wife of the prime minister, is in hospital in Montreal for what a spokesman in the prime minister's office termed a rest and checkups.

Although a spokesman at Royal Victoria Hospital confirmed Monday night that Mrs. Trudeau, who celebrated her 26th birthday last week, was in hospital, he would not discuss why she was there. He only confirmed that she had entered the hospital several days ago.

An indication that her entry into hospital has no serious implications is the continuing schedule of the prime minister.

Monday night he attended a performance at the National Arts Centre here and is to officially open the Canada-Russia hockey series in Quebec City tonight.

The news that she was in hospital caught most people by surprise, including top personnel in the prime minister's office who, when asked to comment, said it was the first they had heard of the matter.

Although not especially in the public eye since the campaign for the July 8 federal election, Mrs. Trudeau has not been inactive.

She spent some time with her husband and two sons at their summer cottage at nearby Harrington Lake, took a private trip to Europe in mid-August and last week accompanied the prime minister to Vancouver for a testimonial dinner to Senator Arthur Laing, an old family friend and colleague of both her father and her husband.

Mrs. Trudeau's father, James Sinclair, was a cabinet minister in the Liberal governments of both prime ministers W. L. Mackenzie King and Louis St. Laurent.

During the election campaign, as well as travelling extensively with the prime minister, Mrs. Trudeau did some personal campaigning in her native British Columbia and in Quebec.

$345,569 for Victoria

The provincial government will grant Victoria $345,569 this year in lieu of taxes on provincially-held land in the city.

Cabinet orders released Monday showed the province will pay a total of $1,433,694 in grants to cities, towns, villages and municipalities in B.C. in lieu of regular property taxes.

In 1973, victoria was granted $305,944 and city council had estimated a grant of $312,000 for 1974.

The provincial grants are based on a rate of 15 mills on the full assessed value of provincial land and three-quarters of the full assessed value of improvements on the land.

Victoria will receive the largest grant, followed by Coquitlam, $202,449, Vancouver $172,571 and Burnaby, $118,578.

Superiority of What?

The United States and the Soviet Union meet tomorrow to resume their talks on how to put controls on the nuclear arms race, and by how much. The two countries are presumably anxious to curb both the expense and the lethal potential of the continuing proliferation of nuclear weapons, but neither seems willing to put a definitive limit on its armament: each partial agreement leaves loopholes through which the nuclear race can continue.

The Nixon-Brezhnev agreement of last June, for instance, attempted to hold down the number of nuclear missiles allowed each country, but it did not halt the process of altering individual missiles to carry an increasing number of independently delivered warheads. It sought to limit underground tests — but permitted explosions of less than 150-kilotons which is ten times the power of the Hiroshima bomb.

The progress to date is progress mainly because at least meetings have been held and the way is kept open for further meetings. But the world still lives under the threat of enough American nuclear bombs to equal 369,769 of the Hiroshima-type bombs, and enough Russian missiles to equal 718,538 Hiroshima explosions. That hardly represents control of nuclear armaments; certainly it does not provide global security except through the deterrent of the power of duplicate extinction.

As U.S. State Secretary Kissinger has asked, under such conditions "what, in the name of God, is strategic superiority at these levels of numbers . . . what can we do with it?"

The United States delegation unfortunately finds behind it divided opinions on the best way in which to approach conferences with the Russians. Mr. Kissinger — a powerful voice — inclines to the belief that the best tactic is to win a small agreement here, a small advance there, until over the years a reliable structure of nuclear control can be built up.

But Defence Secretary Schlesinger and other Washington figures, hold that an effort should be made to go for the whole bundle, and keep after a comprehensive arms control pact which will shut all the doors at once. The catch to this approach, as Mr. Schlesinger admits, is that "you may wait more or less eternally" to get such an agreement.

This is small comfort for the average citizen, whether of the two participating nations or of any other part of the world. But the fact remains clear to everyone: that the imposition of agreed controls — controls which really work — cannot be left much longer if they are to be effective. Mr. Kissinger gives the world until 1977 to work out an agreement. By that time, he believes, there will be "an explosion of technology and an explosion of numbers at the end of which we will be lucky if we have the present stability." And that is little enough.

Give Consumers a Voice

Hard on the heels of fresh news about Canada's rotten egg count — 28 million and rising at last report — comes disturbing information about the marketing of another poultry product closer to home.

The British Columbia broiler chicken marketing board is the subject of a just-released graduate thesis by a University of B.C. student in agricultural economics, and it contains a rather severe indictment of the way broilers are raised and sold in this province.

Comparing the B.C. board with its Washington state counterpart, the thesis found that chicken farmers here make twice the profit of Washington state producers, that production costs are higher here while efficiency is lower and competition does not exist.

It also discovered that in B.C., supermarkets can charge a mark-up of about 30 cents a pound on retail sales of broiler chickens, while in Washington state the figure is between five and eight cents a pound.

"In place of organized marketing, a system of monopoly control by producers has evolved," it stated.

The provincial government, which created the marketing board system with the Natural Products Marketing Act, is rightly blamed for the present state of affairs.

Amendments to the act were promised earlier this year by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich so consumers and others could sit on the various marketing boards, which now are entirely controlled by producers.

But the government developed cold feet in the ensuing chicken-and-egg war in the legislature over alleged interference by Premier Dave Barrett in the affairs of the egg board, and the liberalization of marketing boards seems to have been dropped.

There can be little excuse for further delay in allowing the consumer a say in how such staple food items as eggs and chickens are sold, considering the present state of mismanagement in the national egg agency and the provincial broiler board. He can only improve the situation.

Governments and Strikers

OTTAWA — John Munro has been one of the more frustrated ministers in recent weeks; a fact which should probably be borne in mind in considering the peculiar logic of his recent speech to Canadian publishers.

The address was notable for the announcement that Mr. Munro plans to invite business and labor to join with government officials in a continuing study of labor relations. There are some sound arguments for such a study, including those mentioned in his text.

According to the labor minister public confidence in the system of settling disputes is falling. Signs of public exasperation are, indeed, very widespread. It is not surprising in this situation that Mr. Munro senses "growing pressure on governments . . . to play a stronger and perhaps more dominating role in industrial relations."

There are other reasons for national disquiet emphasized not by Mr. Munro but by his colleague, John Turner, in a Vancouver speech. Discussing the unsatisfactory performance of the economy in recent months, the minister of finance observed:

Not Favorable

"But circumstances during that period from April to June were certainly not the most favorable. The contraction or slow growth of the economies of virtually all of our major trading partners abroad resulted in some decline in the volume of our exports. Much more important is the fact that between January and June industrial disputes resulted in 5.2 million man-days of lost work and output.

"That is an unenviable record for any six-month period in the last 12 years. It is more than twice the total of man-days lost during the same period last year and, in fact, is nearly equal to the total for the whole of 1973."

What an interesting contrast. The Minister of Finance speaks of "the heavy drag imposed on the economy by widespread strikes." The minister of labor, lecturing publishers on the duties of the press, announces with apparent pride that work stoppages occurred "in only 25 of 181 major contracts settled."

Mr. Munro, making a case for his proposal, said: "What is desirable, surely, is greater understanding of the fact that the onus for improved industrial relations falls jointly on labor, management and government." No one, surely, would quarrel with that although the onus may vary, depending on circumstances, from one situation to another.

But having made a case for study, the minister then proceeded to demonstrate that his mind is made up on controversial issues. Governments cannot legislate industrial harmony as this government long since indicated that it would do, in its own time, in the grain handlers dispute. Turning Parliament into a labor court "would further emasculate the collective bargaining process."

How far has it been emasculated and by whom? Outlawing strikes won't put an end to strikes. Widespread compulsory arbitration "would also bring increased disharmony and increased disruption."

It would appear then that Mr. Munro's students from business and labor are to be brought together so that officials may run through the legislation demonstrating how faithfully the various sections reflect the inexhaustible wisdom of the department and the government. Presumably, a few changes might be considered here and there but nothing to disrupt a system which Mr. Munro obviously regards with general equanimity.

LABOR MINISTER MUNRO
. . . senses growing pressure

Turning to the responsibilities of the press, the minister explained that newspapers could build on a good record of achievement "by acknowledging that the system really isn't all bad." They have been at fault, it seems, by projecting a "lopsided view." The public "is regularly, virtually daily, deluged with reports on strikes, lockouts, picket lines and other indications of industrial disharmony."

No doubt the record is imperfect; most records are. The general idea seems to be that settlements should be given as much space as strikes so that the public will readily grasp how enviable the record is: work stoppages in only 25 of 181 major contracts settled.

But would a perfect balance correspond to public need? Only recently citizens of the vast metropolis of Toronto wondered from day to day whether they would be able to ride to work or whether they would have to walk. It was surely much more important to have the latest word on this than to peruse extended reports on the latest harmonious settlement somewhere else in the country.

Again, it is pleasant to read that a group of civil servants have settled with Treasury Board but of somewhat greater concern to farmers that Mr. Munro has accomplished absolutely nothing up to this point in his efforts to resolve the West Coast grain handlers' dispute.

Startling Results

If the minister's principle was applied at all generally, the results would be startling. They would delight Mr. Whelan because any intelligence about rotten eggs would have had to be relegated to an obscure place on an inside page. How else could newspapers have accomodated ten times as much publicity about the eggs which CEMA managed to dispose of while they were still fresh or the other eggs which, mercifully, escaped CEMA's good offices?

There would be no space for the day's head-on collisions either because most citizens, on any given day, manage to escape head-on collisions which is doubtless a continuing miracle in present conditions.

There are other difficulties. Disharmony is a pleasantly antiseptic term. But it may cover anything from peaceful, orderly picketing to the destruction of machinery or bomb explosions. It is not remarkable that some manifestations of disharmony receive more attention than others; they do, after all, arouse wider and deeper public concern.

In any case there is no certainty that a more balanced presentation would be as helpful to the government as Mr. Munro seems to think. Any settlement, in the minister's accounting, is evidence of the "effective, constructive side of industrial relations". But it may be evidence that the two sides have come together in harmony through a common perception that higher costs can be passed on to the consuming public.

For those adversely affected, such harmonies can be almost as unsettling as the discords. If all settlements were on such a basis, Mr. Munro would have a perfect record (by his tests) but it is far from certain that the achievement would lead to a new high in public confidence.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Comparison

Having recently visited your beautiful city, we had an opportunity to compare the ferry service of the B.C. Ferries and Black Ball Transport. There is no comparison!

The B.C. ferries are comfortable with adequate seating for all ticket holders. On the Black Ball transport all seats were taken by foot passengers leaving those with cars to stand or cross a very rough strait below in their cars.

It seems we are comparing two monopolies, governmental and private. On all counts the private monopoly seems to be out for money, with total disregard for the public. Not only is the cost between Victoria and Port Angeles double that from Vancouver to Victoria for less distance but the attitude of the employees is appalling.

Trying to be sure of a place on the last ferry to Port Angeles, we were given various advice, even an outright lie. At 9:30 a.m. we were told that there was no place for lining up until after the 3:30 p.m. ferry had left. But at 10:00 a.m. another car was shown the holding area. If we had arrived at 3:30 p.m. we undoubtedly would have not made the 7:30 p.m. ferry.

Employees directing the parking on the ferry had cars pull right up to campers, thus trapping people inside, in yet another attempt to get more cars on the ferry and thus more money.

From our experience, which we are sure is the same for all, we encourage all who can to travel by the B.C. Ferries.

Whenever Americans think that private is superior to government ownership, we will be happy to use the comparison as a case when it is not.

Perhaps since Black Ball Transport has a terminal right in your city and tourism is important, your city officials can require adequate seating as a minimum, or reduced rates for standees.

This corporation needs to learn that being a monopoly doesn't give it the right to take advantage of its patrons. — Julie Hinson, 756 Lee, Redding, Calif.

Cat Tricks

Siamese cats have character, more like a dog, they watch what a human does and figure out how to do the same. Unless seen, people would say this is impossible for an animal to do.

One owner takes the chill off food, by putting the tin in a pan of warm water with the lid on. The cat jumped on the table and with his paw hooked the lid off by the knob. He saw doors opened by the handle so jumped up and swung on it till the door opened. To prevent this a chair was placed against the door; a few days afterwards the owner saw the cat in another room, and replaced the chair, then watched from a passage. The cat went between the door and the chair, pushed the chair away with his body, then swung on the door handle and entered the forbidden room.

Bureau drawers he also pushed open from the top against the drawer knobs and hooked out contents onto the floor with his paw. He has never been taught any tricks, just uses eyes and brain. Now all doors have a catch put on high up. He knows which door bell rings, back or front, and races there first. Does the same thing when the phone rings and rushes to the table, sitting there during a conversation. Can any Siamese owner beat these actions?

It has been said that animals don't think but I have seen so many that do, even to a dumb cow. When seeing a cowboy riding to drive a bunch home, she will hide in the willow bushes and keep quite still, so the bell she has on won't ring. Very annoying after rain, for the cowboy gets soaked. — Canadian.

Visual Record

How many of your readers have been to see the remarkable collection of paintings currently on view at the Maritime Museum in Bastion Square? This collection of between fifty and sixty war-time pictures is here on loan from the Canadian War Museum. It is a magnificent visual record of the great days of the Royal Canadian Navy in World War II.

These paintings will stir the hearts and minds of all patriotic Canadians, but they will touch especially the men and women who served during those years. In these paintings, depicting all aspects of naval warfare, there is a great sense of immediacy, which photographic skill could never capture. The artists have caught both the stark agony and the lighter side of naval warfare.

From an artistic point of view the collection has much to offer. Victoria is noted for its artistic fraternity. In this splendid collection they will find represented Harold Beament, C. A. F. Law, Tom Woods, Jack Nichols and other outstanding war-time artists. The exhibition will be on display until October 12.

On the occasion of viewing these war paintings one should also take the opportunity to examine the special display case containing the Victoria Cross. This medal was won by Roland Rourke, a former resident of B.C. Most of us are never privileged to see a V.C. Here is one, won, as it were, by a fellow-citizen. —Mrs. B. P. Allard, No. 2—919 Vancouver St.

Grave Problem

I wish to respond to your editorial "Liberating Dick and Jane" in the Sept. 5 issue of The Times. You suggest that removing sex bias from the curriculum and text books is relatively unimportant and yet research has revealed gross inequalities in our educational system perpetrated through sexist literature.

Children are taught, through books, society's concepts of what is masculine and feminine. Previously prescribed curriculum has provided socially acceptable models which stress independence, leadership, strength, and dominance for boys and dependence, acceptance, weakness and passivity for girls.

"A small point" you state.

Page 181 of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada states, "Girls need special help in overcoming these pressures of society. Early in their lives they must be shown the implications of educational choices, the wide options from which they can choose, and the way that custom has created divisions of work between men and women. This help should come from their families, teachers and guidance counsellors."

If we are ever to rectify the situation that exists in education, we must raise the level of awareness of all parents and educators to the realization of the changing roles of men and women now taking place in our culture. Without awareness we have tokenism; with it we shall have true acceptance of woman in her rightful place in society. Simply changing the structure to upgrade positions will not result in changing traditional attitudes. The structural changes can be implemented immediately and are important to ensure discrimination of women is removed. However, the awareness-raising process will require a concentrated effort over a longer period on the part of the educator.

We applaud the provincial government's recognition of this grave problem, and the hiring of a special consultant to assist the department in removing sexual bias from texts and curriculum is hopefully one small step toward people liberation. — (Ms) Mavis De Girolamo, President, Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Garden Party

As Rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Lakehill, may I, on behalf of our Church Committee and the parishioners, extend to you our very sincere thanks for bringing to the attention of the general public through your medium the announcement of our Garden Party which was held at the home of Major General and Mrs. Pearkes on July 20 of this year.

It was most kind of you to render this service to us and we are extremely grateful.—W. B. Mundy, Rector, St. Peter's Church, Lakehill.

Complete Mockery

Your lead editorial of Sept. 10 draws attention to the extraordinary manner in which North Cowichan has been granted a license to dam the Chemainus River. This follows an article by Ed Mankelow of the B.C. Wildlife Federation in B.C. Outdoors magazine which details the probable harmful effects of this dam.

In placing this matter before a cabinet committee which included neither the Minister of Recreation and Conservation nor the Minister of Lands, Forests and Water Resources, the government chose to circumvent its own environmental safeguards completely. After the water rights comptroller had, properly, refused the license, the matter should have come to the Environment and Land Use Committee and its Secretariat. Failing to follow this procedure makes a complete mockery of Premier Barrett's declaration to this organization that a provincial department of the environment was not needed because the E. and L.U. Secretariat would fulfill this function.

This government is undoubtedly an environmentally concerned one: we trust they will have the good sense to start anew on this matter by revoking the decision of the cabinet committee and referring it to the Environment and Land Use committee where it rightfully belongs.—Elton A. Anderson, Past President, Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

The Beast

In the September 3 article by James Reston, "Holiday Today, Worry Later", the words of Jean Monnet, father of the Common Market, saying that Europe has never existed, only gives confirmation to the words of God through the prophet Daniel that the toes of the image seen in a dream by the king of Babylon would not cleave together—the ten toes being prophetic of the ten nations into which Rome was divided and named by Edward Gibbon in his Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire—and according to Daniel 2:44 the two world wars mentioned by Mr. Monnet were a necessary part of the continuing preparations for God setting up His Kingdom on earth in place of those which proved faulty.

Daniel being moved to use beasts to represent nations in chapters 7 and 8, prepared the way for Revelation 13:1 and 2 to tell of one beast which is made up out of several beasts rising up out of the sea (of humanity, Revelation 17:15) the 17th verse saying that no man can buy or sell unless he has the mark of the beast, which gives a clear picture of the one organization which is made up of the several nations coming together in the Common Market. The future of this conglomerate beast is shown in Revelation 19:19, and the kingdom of God in Revelation 20:4. — Miss E. France, Sidney.

City council decided to sell trees from Beacon Hill nursery to the provincial government for landscaping of Strathcona Park. Although construction work on boulevards in Victoria has declined, trees from the nursery remain in high demand for maintenance and replacement of young damaged trees. The city maintains more than 58 miles of boulevard with some 10,000 trees on them. Shade trees are offered to the public by the nursery on the sole condition that recipients give them proper attention.

Democracy Is Not Magic Word in Asia

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH
The London Observer

SINGAPORE — President Suharto's recent goodwill visit here was a further striking reminder in a month of memorable events that all over the Third World the West is now under the watchmaker's glass, its mechanism and movements, subject to suspicious scrutiny for flaws and failures.

The smiling Indonesian leader arrived in this predominantly Chinese republic, for so long a focus for hostility in his own sprawling archipelago, as the bitter wrangling between the rich and poor nations on matters as far apart as the law of the sea and the population explosion petered out for lack of more time to talk in Caracas and Bucharest. As for hallowed Western systems of government, it had already begun to seem to many Asian observers that if religion was the opium of the people, democracy was a mind-expanding drug that persuaded them they could fly before they could walk.

It has accordingly received some rough handling east of India. The constitutional foundations of General Suharto's political power were laid in 1971 when the Indonesian "Sekber Golkar" or "Joint Secretariat of Functional Groups", carefully forged as the political instrument of the President and the Army, predictably won a landslide victory in general elections for a 640-member parliament, 100 of whose seats were already automatically reserved for soldiers nominated by his government.

The Golkar has since been modified, but with some 35,000 left-wing detainees behind the wire and other, heavily-axed political groups threatening to fade out of existence altogether, Indonesia has nonetheless moved closer to becoming a one-party state. The Indonesians have in any case thrown out the alien concept that the majority must always get its way as grossly unfair on the minority, and fallen back on their native tradition of arguing and bargaining until every debate ends in "unanimous agreement".

President Suharto flew here after paying a state visit to President Ne Win of Burma, a fellow-general who seized power by force in 1962 but restored it to the voter earlier this year when the Burmese were permitted to hold general elections for a new people's assembly. The 451 seats in this assembly are logically filled by civilians and soldiers of the Burma Socialist Programme Party which he himself created, however, since no other party is allowed to exist in the union.

Nor did Suharto find himself on entirely strange ground when he reached this island, for although there is no such animal as a Singaporean political general, and democracy is decked out with most of the trappings and trip-wires of the Mother of Parliaments herself, all 65 seats in the fully-elected House are in the hands of the ruling People's Action Party of Premier Lee Kuan Yew, who has been in power since 1959.

A political tour of the non-Communist orient tells its own tale. After nearly thirty years of democratic free-for-all, the Philippine Republic is under martial law, and in five other States — Indonesia, Burma, Cambodia, South Korea and South Vietnam — the law is even more martial in a sense. For in each case the president is an ex-general who acquired power as a soldier, and whose main initial concession to democracy was simply to change out of uniform into mufti.

An outstanding exception to this tradition is the Federation of Malaysia, where free elections were held a fortnight ago. But in these free elections the ruling National Front — in which Malay, Chinese and Indian parties are allied under Malay leadership — crushed the opposition to win a two-thirds majority that enables it to remould the constitution at will.

The landslide surprised no one. Tun Abdul Razak, the Malaysian Prime Minister, had warned voters that states in the Federation which did not return local majorities for the National Front need expect no federal aid for the "implementation of development projects" in the future. Its other leaders meanwhile stressed that if the non-Malays — notably the big Chinese and Indian minorities in Malaysia — did not vote for candidates nominated by the Front, it would simply form an all-Malay government in which the interests of their ethnic groups would not be represented at all.

But it was a famous victory. For in the previous general elections of 1969 the dividing-line between government and opposition had fatally reflected the dividing-line between race and race, and the immediate consequences had been bloody communal rioting in which nearly 200 were brutally murdered, and the suspension of parliament. This time the candidates from the different racial groups within the National Front all did well at the polls, so that the government benches and the cabinet itself could fairly reflect the full spectrum of the multicolored Malaysian community.

It is useless for armchair intellectuals to cavil. The pragmatic Asian points out that the Anglo-Saxon powers themselves have proved that liberalism is a luxury young and frail nations cannot afford. "Guided democracy" may not be perfect, but it is better than misguided democracy, and while freedom is fine, freedom of freedoms can be disastrous. A Malaysian disfigured by armed Communist insurgency is more concerned with racial peace and economic progress than preserving an immaculately democratic image.

Singapore, where the government can now say who may or may not own the management shares on a newspaper or how long a man's hair may be, where the individual enjoys freedom to behave like a responsible citizen as the government defines him (and to pay a whopping penalty if he does not), is run in accordance with corporate disciplines that keep wages down and the GNP up. "And if people say that balancing our budget and refusing to go along with the fads and fancies of the contemporary permissive societies of the West is authoritarianism," said Premier Lee Kuan Yew last week, "well, so be it. Singapore is solvent."

President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines is not shy of the word either. He has denied that martial law in Manila has killed democracy, for the "authoritarian" powers he now wields were approved by a popular referendum, he reminds his critics. It is therefore "up to the people" to decide when they want his one-man democracy to end.

Marcos may be understandably slow to return power to the Filipino citizen, but a similar reluctance has been remarked in Bangkok, where militant students overthrew the ruling Army bosses last October. Since those momentous hours Thailand has been run by a somewhat ineffectual civilian government while a nominated legislative assembly has been drawing up a new constitution.

But the peace has been rudely broken by growing insurgency and strikes and more student unrest among a people who have found their new freedom only fits where it touches, and if summer in Britain this year was seven days in May, in Thailand it was a long, hot July during which 30 died in violent rioting and demonstrations which began when police gave a taxi-driver a ticket for a minor traffic offence. With the military still watching darkly from the sidelines, the cabinet is now wondering just what will happen when the new democratic constitution is finally promulgated and general elections are held.

But hearts are no lighter in Laos, where the highest instances of government are an uneasy coalition cabinet in which power is shared equally by non-Communist and Communist ex-enemies, a schizophrenic National Political Council that mirrors the schizophrenic cabinet, and a right-wing National Assembly that mirrors neither. Small wonder that Prince Souvanna Phouma had a heart attack in July — but this means that while the prestigious neutralist premier is away convalescing, his Communist deputy becomes acting prime minister of the kingdom in his place.

The motives of men who question the validity of a concept like democracy, with its incommoding shackles for the power-hungry, are obviously mixed and sometimes suspect. But as its mutants multiply in Asia, the pragmatists score steadily over the idealists, for they argue that an overload of democracy makes not only for maximum instability at home, but for maximum instability abroad — and that at a time when the going has become disconcertingly rough, the whole world is suffering from too much play on the political steering.

ECONOMIC INTERDEPENDENCE IS REAL

We're All in This Inflation Mess Together

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH
New York Times

PARIS — It used to be said that when the United States sneezes the rest of the world catches cold. That still applies, but now the reverse holds true.

Economic interdependence, as distant and academic as the phrase may sound, has come to have real meaning when gasoline at a Bronx pump can be shut off by an international oil cartel, when Europeans and Japanese drink Coca Cola, when a boost in New York interest rates drives up the Londoner's mortgage payments, when a bank collapse in Cologne hits British, Austrian and American banks as well, when a drought in the United States drives up food costs for the rest of the world.

International commerce has increased each year since World War II, and promises to do so again this year despite the financial troubles of the world.

What happens next year and the year after is open to question. Should the financial troubles affect trade, as they well might if bankruptcies continue rising and business and consumer confidence continues falling, then trade could drop as fast as it has grown.

Rising standards of living, ever more consumption, the progressive lowering of tariffs, their elimination inside the European Common Market, have generated this interdependence in commerce and employment.

But they have also generated an interrelationship in world inflation rates. That may be good when rates are falling but is not good when, as at present, rates are rising.

Here the United States bears much of the responsibility by forcing other industrial countries in the late 1960's and early 1970's to swallow some $100-billion of excess dollars and so help it finance the war in Vietnam. In that time of fixed exchange rates and substantial American budget deficits caused by the Vietnam war, they were offered the unhappy choice of accepting more dollars to add to their already swollen holdings as a means of settling balance of payments imbalances, or sharply upvaluing their currencies, which they could not do without losing trade advantages and creating unemployment.

KISSINGER

Through the mechanics of international financial and commercial markets, these excess dollars, not much in terms of the trillion-dollar annual output of the United States economy but a lot for the smaller economies of Europe and Japan, transmitted American inflation to the other industrial nations. And the inflation came back to reinfect the United States when the oil-exporting states last year took advantage of their monopoly to quadruple prices.

★ ★ ★

The Federal Energy Administration has just reported that the embargo reduced the civilian labor force in the United States by 500,000 men and women during this year's first quarter. Higher energy prices, furthermore, caused a sharp upturn in the Consumer Price Index.

The United States and the rest of the world need the Middle East oil states because they control 60 per cent of the commerce in oil. The oil states need Western technology and count on the American defense umbrella.

The success of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has sparked efforts of developing countries exporting copper, bauxite, tin, iron, silver, coffee and bananas to form similar associations. Though the world depends on these commodities as well, the big difference is that they don't affect an entire economy the way oil does. Thus embargoes have to be maintained much longer to exert their effects. And it is relatively easy to recycle many such products, especially metals, but it is out of the question for oil.

The interdependence of developing and developed countries shows up in the trade in commodities. Here are some figures that explain what's been happening in the past two years.

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Development organization in Geneva reports that developing countries other than oil producers received in 1973 about $11-billion more as a result of increased commodity prices, but they already had to pay $10 billion more for the import of capital goods and food. And in 1974 the non-oil producers will have to pay some $8-billion more for oil imports.

The World Bank in Washington has calculated that these countries will have to receive at least $2.6-billion additional aid from the industrial countries in 1974, above what was foreseen, to maintain acceptable growth levels. In 1975 this sum would have to be about $6.8-billion and between 1976 and 1980 the annual average would be $10-billion to $12-billion.

The flow of financial resources to the developing countries totalled $24-billion in 1973. Even if it remains at the same level in 1974, the non-oil producers could not finance trade deficits.

So if they get no additional aid, they will have to curb imports either of food or capital goods. Whichever way it works the poor nations look like getting poorer.

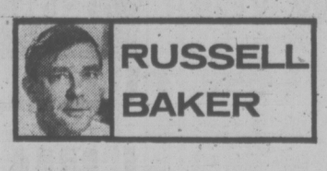
And for those in the "Fourth World" — the Sahel countries south of the Sahara, a number of East African and Central American countries and those on the Indian subcontinent — who have practically nothing to sell but who now must pay much more for everything they import including the food they desperately need, famine and death lie behind the statistics of interdependence.

Shortage of food, the problems of oil, the troubles with money, the fears over jobs, these are the things that plague today's interdependent world.

"Will we consume ourselves in nationalistic rivalry which the realities of interdependence make suicidal?" Secretary of State Henry Kissinger asked last February at an energy conference in Washington. "Or will we acknowledge our interdependance and shape co-operative solutions?"

He added: "Our response may well determine our capacity to deal with the international agenda of the future."

Pardon Me, I'm Suffering



Wendell H. Howes,
Chief of Police,
Nantucket, Mass.
Dear Chief Howes:

I have your traffic ticket which was left on my automobile in August, for a parking violation, said violation having occurred when I briefly left my car in a forbidden space while shopping for wine at Henry's Package Goods Store near the steamboat wharf. Your ticket instructs me to remit a payment of $5 in punishment, and I would do so immediately were I not firmly persuaded that such punishment would constitute an injustice with which neither you nor the town Selectmen wish to have your names forever linked in history.

I, therefore, request a full pardon from this $5 parking fine, in support of which proposal I cite the following precedents for pardon:

1. The "already suffered enough" precedent—Before being driven to commit the violation at Henry's, I had sought parking spaces in the vicinity, first, of Murray's Liquor Store, and second, of the Islander Liquors Shop.

In each case I was waved out of illegal parking spaces by meter maids, who indicated their intention to ticket me if I persisted in parking. In both cases I gladly made the sacrifice out of my great respect for law and order. By the time the illegal parking spot near Henry's was located, it was quite clear that I had already suffered enough in satisfying the law's harsh demands, and so I parked the car.

At Henry's I purchased two half-gallon jugs of domestic red wine at $4.55 each for serving at a large dinner. An oafish dog later knocked one of these jugs off the kitchen table and smashed it, thus putting me out $4.55.

Moreover, the guests criticized the remaining wine as inferior stuff and suggested that I had shown meanness of purse in serving it.

In the $4.55 financial loss caused by the dog and in the loss of face suffered before my guests, I contend that I have already suffered enough and, therefore, should not be asked to bear the additional burden of a $5 parking ticket.

2. The "hanging is enough, you don't have to draw-and-quarter-'em" precedent—the paper shortage prevents me from listing all the money Nantucket extracted from me this summer, but even a summary must persuade you that I have already been hanged, financially speaking, if not drawn.

I mean, really now, $93 for water! And $62 a month for electricity. And $75 a month for oil? In a month when there was no heat running. And the ferry service. It costs more per mile to ride that ferry from Wood's Hole to Nantucket than it costs to travel to Europe first class on the France.

In view of the sums Nantucket has already exacted from my bank balance, I am certain you will agree with me that the insistence on yet another $5 cheque amounts to drawing and quartering the already hanged. As pardoned President Nixon once asked, do you want to pick the carcass?

3. The "Americas tragedy" precedent—I have never committed a mugging, cracked a safe, stuck up a gas station, or stolen fancy bicycles from children. In short, I am not a crook.

Is it not an American tragedy indeed when someone as eminently law abiding as I finds himself caught parking in a forbidden space? When that space is in an area as crowded as the steamboat wharf, the tragedy is compounded, for his shame is flaunted before hundreds and hundreds of passers-by who inevitably see the parking ticket tied to the door handle of his humiliated car.

It is surely better for the country to put tragedy of this order behind it, and to grant its victim such poor mercy as is within temporal government's limited power.

I, therefore, urge the Town of Nantucket to rise above a too scrupulous passion for law enforcement and pardon me this $5 parking fine as a gesture of appreciation for the high quality of the tragedy with which my car and I have enriched Nantucket's otherwise humdrum summer season.

Assuming that the town will act favorably on my pardon, I will also take this opportunity to notify town authorities that I shall soon be requesting a substantial sum of money from the Nantucket treasury.

If I am to grant the town the boon of my residence there next summer, I shall require a considerable monetary allowance for office expenses, travel costs (that murderous ferry!) and miscellaneous, whatever that may be. A detailed estimate of these charges will be sent later. I mention them here only to give early notice that it may be necessary to increase parking fines in order to finance my continuing residence on the island.

In the meantime I await notice of my pardon.

N.B. Cook

N. B. Cook Corp. Ltd. reported net earnings of $2,305,058 or 77 cents a share for the year ended May 31, 1974, up 110 per cent from $1,098,787 or 37 cents a share the year before.

Revenues rose to $25,994,607 from $15,617,067.

Neil B. Cook, president, said in the annual report that the biggest gains were in the land development division.

This division expanded from Vancouver and nearby Richmond to include Edmonton and Calgary, Cook said.

Land development and sale will continue to be one of N. B. Cook Corp.'s major sources of income, he said.

CAE Electronics

CP Air of Vancouver has purchased two new jet aircraft flight simulators at a total cost of almost $6 million, CAT Electronics has announced.

CP Air ordered a Boeing 747 and Boeing 727 flight simulator for installation at its new flight training centre in Vancouver late in 1975, CAE said in a statement.

OK Helicopters

Net earnings of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. were $309,107, or 34 cents a share, for the six months ended July 31, 1974. The figures compared with $301,535 and 33 cents for the comparable 1973 period.

Fully-diluted, the earnings per share were 31 cents and 30 cents, respectively. Cash flow from operations was up 27 per cent at $1,883,841, or $2.12 per share, compared with $1.67.

In a report to shareholders, chairman and president John W. Pitts said revenues were up 14 per cent at $9,799,643 and earnings before taxes were up 48 per cent at $589,610.

Pitts said high interest rates had a major impact on earnings. He said the company's activity had increased in the international market and in east coast offshore drilling support.

Energex

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. has reached a tentative agreement for the sale of its interests in Energex Ltd. of San Diego to Industrial America Corp. of Jacksonville, Fla.

MacMillan Bloedel announced Monday that the agreement includes a provision whereby it would acquire a 28 per cent interest in Industrial America would be represented by MacMillan Bloedel's ventures group.

Energex is a manufacturer of forced vortex burners which use wood waste to generate power for sawmill and other forest products operations.

Industrial America, with sales of about $50 million, owns Moore Oregon and Moore Canada, manufacturers and installers of custom-designed systems for treating and handling forest products.

Terra

Terra Mining and Exploration Ltd. reports a loss of $222,653 for the first half of 1974 on earnings of $1,706,523.

Alvin Harter, firm president, said Terra has been concentrating on gaining access to a new vein at its silver mine on Great Bear Lake.

Comtech

Comtech Group International Ltd. has agreed in principle to a cash purchase of Pica Data Services Ltd. of Cambridge, Ont. The price was not disclosed.

Brinco to Merge With Rio Algom

TORONTO (CP) — Two major Canadian mining companies, Rio Algom Mines Ltd. of Toronto and Brinco Ltd. of Montreal, have agreed to merge, it was announced Monday.

A Rio Algom official said the merger was in the best interests of both companies since their activities are closely aligned.

No date has been set for the merger.

Rio Algom said in a release that a tender offer of $7.07 a share will be made on Sept. 25 by Brinco to Brinco shareholders. The offer is in line with an earlier promise made by Brinco to its shareholders, after sale of the Churchill Falls power project to Newfoundland.

The shareholders will have the choice of either selling their shares or continuing as a shareholder in the merged company.

The offer will remain open until near the date of merger.

Payment for Brinco shares tendered before Oct. 25 will be made by Nov. 1. After that payment will be made at appropriate intervals, the release said.

At the same time Brinco has declared a special dividend of $1.20 a share payable Oct. 15, with a record of Sept. 25.

For purposes of the merger each Brinco share will be valued at $7.30. A Rio Algom share will be valued at the weighted average of all Rio Algom common shares traded on the Toronto Stock Exchange during the 10 consecutive trading days ending seven days before the date of merger.

But under no circumstances will 10 Brinco shares be equal to more than three Rio Algom shares, the company said.

Brinco trading was halted Friday and last closed at $6.75. Rio Algom closed down 25 cents to $26 at end of Monday's trading.

Rio Tinto Zinc Corp. Ltd. of London, England, directly or through subsidiaries controls 59.7 per cent of Rio Algom and 49.4 per cent of Brinco.

Rio Tinto has decided not to accept the $7.07 offer by Brinco and will vote shares as will be necessary to effect the merger.

Rio Algom recently announced the sale of $740 million worth of uranium oxide to two United States electric utilities.

Both companies have extensive uranium, asbestos and coal interests in Canada.

Rio Algom reported net earnings for the first six months ended June 30 of $29,408,000 or $2.37 a share. Brinco's consolidated net income in the same period, excluding the Churchill Falls sale, was $4,352,000 or 19 cents a share.

HIRAM WALKER

APPOINTMENT

J. DOUGLAS YOUNG

Lorne W. Duguid, Executive Vice-President, Hiram Walker & Sons Limited, is pleased to announce the appointment of J. Douglas Young to the position of General Sales Manager of the company.

With extensive sales and marketing experience in the United Kingdom and Canada, Mr. Young joined Hiram Walker in 1970 as Manager Special Projects and prior to his new appointment was Assistant General Sales Manager.

He is a member of the Rotary Club, Toronto Board of Trade and Sales and Marketing Executives Association.

Mr. Young will continue to maintain his headquarters in the company's Toronto office at 15 Toronto Street. ***

—3 year 6 month 9¼% bonds due April 1, 1978
Issue price: 100.00% yielding about 9.25% for 3 years 6 months

Exchangeable

at the option of the holder, on or before January 1, 1978, into an equal par value of 9¼% bonds due April 1, 1984 yielding about 9.25% for 9 years 6 months

Interest payable April 1 and October 1
Denominations: $1,000, $5,000, $25,000, $100,000 and $1,000,000.

Bank of Canada has agreed to acquire a minimum of $175 million of the new bonds, open as to maturity.

Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $189,620,000 of Government of Canada 8% bonds maturing on October 1, 1974 and for general purposes of the Government of Canada.

The new 9¼% bonds due February 1, 1976 are an addition to $100 million of 9¼% bonds due February 1, 1976 and dated June 15, 1974.

The new bonds will be dated October 1, 1974 and will bear interest from that date. Principal and interest are payable in lawful money of Canada. Principal is payable at any Agency of Bank of Canada. Interest is payable at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank without charge. Definitive bonds will be available on October 1, 1974 and thereafter in two forms: bearer form with coupons attached and fully registered form with interest payable by cheque. Bonds of both forms will be in the same denominations and fully interchangeable as to denomination and/or form without charge (subject to Government transfer requirements where applicable).

The new bonds are authorized pursuant to an Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Applications for the new bonds may be made, subject to allotment, through any investment dealer eligible to act as a primary distributor or through any bank in Canada.

Hockey Turnabout: Russians Are Ready

A week away from the store often works wonders, such as: Why not two weeks? On the other hand it does nothing to stem the irresistible urge to bust back with the perfectly predictable prediction that Team Russia will handle Team Canada '74 rather handily in hockey during the next few weeks.

So it's merrily off on the bandwagon with all the other so-called experts, and what a difference just two years makes. It was just that short while ago that Team Canada '72 was odds on to teach the Soviet Union a lesson. Hockey was our game and the Russians would soon get to learn a thing or two.

True, finally the Russians did, mainly by some great heroics by Paul Henderson, especially that climatic winning goal in the final game; and also by Phil Esposito, quite clearly the heart and the desire of the Canadian club.

Then of course Canada also had two pretty fancy goalkeepers in Ken Dryden and Tony Esposito, plus a bevy of NHL all-stars; and if it wasn't exactly Canada's No. 1 aggregation, it was close, missing only the incomparable Bobby Orr and perhaps a few others, some of whom couldn't be bothered. Others weren't asked. Still, it was top ranked.

But Canada got a licking at home from the visitors. The Russians won laughing in Montreal, lost at Toronto, gained a tie in Winnipeg and then humiliated the Canadians at Vancouver.

If memory is fleeting, it was after that game that Team Canada came alive. And perhaps in retrospect one player made it so.

Phil's Plea Went Answered

Phil Esposito made an impassioned plea on national TV that Canadians should not only rally around the flag, boys, but they should rally around Team Canada because this was their team and, after all, the players were only doing their best.

It was bad enough to get beaten but to be ridiculed by Canadian fans while the beating was being administered was hardly nationalistic and in extremely poor taste too. Shame was dripping all over the tube. And it showed.

So off to Russia went the combatants and Canada's chances didn't appear any brighter after the first game, either. Forgotten, have you? Well, it was 3-0 Canada going into the final period and all sweetness and light. Then the Red tide struck. The Ruskies rammed in five goals, four in less than six minutes. Canada was down 3-1-1 in games with only three to play. Horrors!

But at least things were on the upswing despite some defections. Vic Hadfield, Rick Martin and Jocelyn Guevremont and later Perrault, were all to pack it in. Miraculously, it seemed, both the hockey and the nationalism spurred on no doubt by the many Canadians in Moscow, began to take on a new lustre. Adversity be dammned. The pride began to appear.

Team Canada squeaked by game six, 3-2. Henderson popped the winner in game seven with just over two minutes to play. Now, suddenly, it was game eight for all the honor and the glory.

In that tremesdous final, it was Russia, 5-3, with only 20 minutes left. Then in succession, Esposito scored, Cournoyer banged in a rebound, and the score was tied. Then, with only seconds remaining on the clock, four in fact, Henderson did it for all of Canada. Game over: Canada 6, Russia 5. Series over: Canada 4-3-1.

Who Learned The Most?

But that was 1972, the National Hockey League's best and the Russians' first time around. Now, there is a difference.

As assistant Russian coach Boris Kulagin said in '72. "We hope to learn from this series." Now Kulagin is back as senior coach and he's got 17 holdovers with him from '72. And you can bet your Team Canada buttons that he's learned from the past, and so have the players. Because, if Canada saved face in that final game in Moscow, the Russians won't ever forget it either. They can't. It isn't allowed. Besides, despite all the fanfare surrounding the new Team Canada, composed as it is from World Hockey Association stars, it obviously doesn't compare favorably with the makeup of the '72 club.

It has been said that Team Canada '74 is better prepared for this series than the '72 team because it knows what to expect. True, but so do the Russians, even more so. Or as Kulagin said at the weekend in regard to that "learning process": "We paid a lot of attention to technical points, deflections and play around the crease, and we drew some technical conclusions from it. We studied the different kind of tactics and tried to capitalize on it."

Which means the Russians are ready and if the Canadians may do better at home than in '72, that isn't too much to ask, is it? But in Russia the real hammering might take place, Soviet style.

Sure, Gordie Howe may get to throw an elbow or two, but will that be enough? Not likely, nor even the presence of that other great defector, from the NHL, Bobby Hull, who should have been there the first time.

Two great guys, but maybe two years too late, and with too little to work with too. It's too much to ask.

Russia: five games to three. Turnabout is fair play.

Fencing Display

Anyone wandering through the Hillside Shopping Centre mall this Friday night or Saturday might be startled to hear the clash of crossing swords.

But never fear, it doesn't involve anything sinister.

Members of the Victoria Fencing Club will be demonstrating the techniques of foil, sabre and epee fencing in an effort to recruit new members and attract any experienced fencers who would like to come back to the sport.

If facilities permit, the club also plans to demonstrate its electronic scoring gear when the sessions begin at 7 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday.

The club, which now has about 30 members, meets each Thursday starting at 7:30 p.m. in the St. Michael's University School gymnasium.

Buffalo Pulls It Out Without O.J.

Three touchdowns—two by the Ferguson-to-Rashad combo—were scored in the final 1:56 of the game and Oakland's George Blanda, who turns 47 on Tuesday, missed a 50-yard field goal with six seconds left that would have won for the Raiders.

With 1:56 showing on the clock, Ferguson hit Rashad with a fourth-down scoring pass off nine yards to put the Bills, who played the second half without star running back O.J. Simpson, ahead 14-13.

A roughing-the-passer penalty against the Raiders, a 20-yard pass from Ferguson to Rashad and a 10-yarder to J.D. Hill put the ball on the 17.

Thoms was called for interference, putting Buffalo on the 13, and two plays later Ferguson threw to Rashad for a touchdown and John Leypoldt's extra point gave the Bills the victory.

Oakland took the kickoff after the final Bills' touchdown and drove to the Buffalo 40. But Blanda's 50-yard field goal attempt was wide to the right.

Earlier, Blanda had kicked field goals of 47 and 41 yards.

Buffalo, trailing 13-7 in the fourth quarter, appeared to be headed for a go-ahead touchdown but Oakland's Dan Connors stopped rookie Gary Hayman inside the one-yard line with 9:59 into the period.

Ferguson guided the Bills to the Raider nine and then threw a touchdown strike to Rashad. Oakland regained the lead on Thoms' fumble recovery return 42 seconds later.

Simpson, who set a rushing a record of 2,003 yards last year, picked up 78 yards on 12 carries before leaving the field just before the first half ended with a sprained right ankle.

The initial diagnosis was a slight to moderate sprain and he did not play in the second half. There was no immediate word whether he would be ready for next Sunday's game in Buffalo against the Miami Dolphins.

After a scoreless first period, Ferguson put the Bills on the board with a four-yard touchdown pass to Hill, capping a 54-yard drive.

Oakland came back in the period on Blanda's 34-yard field goal, then Clarence Davis scored from 16 yards out at 4:25 of the third quarter to put the Raiders on top 10-7. Blanda added a 41-yarder later in the period and the score remained the same until the final two minutes.

To Coin a Phrase: An Olympian Profit

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Numismatists find fun and profit in coin collecting.

The Canadian Olympic Association has found greater delight and profit in selling.

And if the profits continue as projected, the COA's Olympic Coin Program may do much to eradicate charges that the taxpayer will be burdened with the major costs incurred with the staging of the 1976 Games in Montreal.

With the initial series already a resounding success, the second series was officially launched Monday.

The second series went on sale across Canada after simultaneous launching ceremonies in Toronto, Montreal and Victoria.

Pierre W. Aubin, director of marketing for the Olympic Coin Program, launched the Western Canada program at a Victoria reception. Also on hand was COA president Harold Wright of Vancouver, who described the coin sales as a major factor in financing the 1976 Olympic Games at Montreal.

Highlight of the Victoria ceremonies was the presentation by Aubin of a prestige set of coins to Doug Peden, a scoring leader of the Canadian team that won a silver medal in basketball at the 1936 Games in Berlin.

Sports Editor of the Times, Peden was singled out for the honor "as a representative of Canada's high standard of Olympic competitors," said Aubin. Peden, a member of the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame who was world-ranked in cycling and equally outstanding in baseball, rugby and tennis, accepted the set of four coins "on behalf of all B.C. athletes."

Aubin said the profit from the sales of the first series is expected to net $35 million. The first series — a total of nine million coins with gross value of $75 million—was virtually sold out during the first week they were marketed.

With seven series scheduled, the Olympic Coins are expected to raise about $250 million.

Of the nine million coins minted, said Aubin, Canada is allocated 3.9 million (40 per cent). The remainder is marketed throughout the world.

Because of the limited number minted (nine million), collectors are guaranteed a premium offering. It shows in the demand. Canadians, for example, have placed advance orders for 1.5 million. That leaves only 2.1 million up for grabs.

Talent 'Less Pure' But Spirit's There

QUEBEC (CP) — Optimism increased around the Team Canada '74 camp Monday as the countdown began for tonight's opener of an eight-game series with the Soviet Union.

Most of the high spirits resulted from realization that the '74 entry, made up of players from the World Hockey Association, is more prepared than was the National Hockey League crew that defeated the Soviets in the first such clash two years ago.

Father David Bauer, who coached Canada's national team in international competition for several seasons, predicted each team will win three games and two will end in ties.

"As even the most dedicated Team Canada supporters have agreed, this team has less pure talent than the 1972 entry," said Father Bauer. "But when I look at the players here and compare them with those we had, I can only be impressed."

Billy Hay, former NHLer with Chicago Black Hawks, predicted "Canada will win."

"We'll never again beat the Russians easily," said Hay, now a director of Hockey Canada, "but we're going to beat them this time."

Two years ago, Canada defeated Russia 4-3 in games with one tie.

Father Bauer said many observers in 1972 predicted that Canada would win eight in a row against the Soviets. This time, many have predicted eight wins in a row for Russia.

"I believe this series will be much closer than many Canadians believe," he said.

Canada and Russia each cancelled a scheduled workout Monday morning and held an afternoon drill.

The defence pairs will be: Rick Ley and Brad Selwood, Pat Stapleton and J. C. Treblay, and Paul Shmyr and Rick Smith.

The forward lines will be: Bobby Hull, Andre Lacroix and Johnny McKenzie; Marc Tardif, Serge Bernier and Repean Houle; Frank Mahovlich, Gordie Howe and Ralph Backstrom; and Paul Henderson, Mie Walton and Bruce Macgregor.

'No Secrets' With Canucks

The wishes of the Los Angeles Kings are not necessarily those of the Vancouver Canucks.

As a result, Canuck manager-coach Phil Maloney is of a mind to break the habit Victorians acquired during the four years Los Angeles based its National Hockey League training camp in Memorial Arena.

The Kings' standing rule was: "No spectators."

Maloney says: "We have nothing to hide."

With Vancouver having shifted its training camp from Medicine Hat to Victoria, Maloney said Monday he "welcomes" the spectators.

"I'd like to have Victoria fans consider the Canucks their team as much as it is Vancouver's," he said.

The 59-man Vancouver camp is split in two shifts. The first team starts workouts at 7:45 a.m. and 1 p.m., the second at 9:30 and 2:45.

BRIEFLY: Maloney confirmed Orland Kurtenbach's appointment as coach of Seattle Totems and expects his former centre to check in "within a few days" and pick up the reins of the affiliate team . . . Flight problems delayed goalie Gary Smith's arrival to Victoria . . . He was the only late arrival or "no show" . . . Barry Wilcox's presence was a surprise . . . A native of New Westminster, the forward had informed the Canucks he planned to retire in order to obtain his masters degree in physical education . . . He showed up Sunday night and reported to Maloney . . .

Two Tries for Saar

It took two trades to get Lloyd Saar to come to Victoria but Cougar coach Pat Ginnell doesn't know what it will take to entice three holdovers back to the Western Canada Hockey League club.

At the same time, Ginnell says he is "writing off" centre Derek Haas, winger Bruce Van Camp and winger Al McLaren — all holdovers — as candidates for the 1974-5 Cougar team.

McLaren and Haas have been quoted as saying they aren't interested in playing in the WCHL any longer, and Ginnell suspects Van Camp is of the same frame of mind.

McLaren plans to continue his education at the University of Victoria while Haas was quoted Monday as saying he no longer has the desire to play in the WCHL. The 19-year-old centre plans to remain in his home town of Trail.

Ginnell refused to show any signs of regret in losing a holdover centre. Although he lacks the aggressiveness Ginnell demands, Haas was expected to help provide much-needed centre strength.

Ginnell appeared more disappointed in losing the 17-year-old Van Camp, a big winger who spent most of last season with Nanaimo Clippers.

"I'm not in the habit of going around to every door to plead with them, especially at this time of year," said Ginnell. "I'm disappointed they haven't bothered to talk things over with me."

That leaves Cougars with 10 holdovers from last season. They are goalies Dan Rogers and Glen Anweiler, defencemen Tim Williams, Rick Peter, Jerry Nicholson, Kim Clackson and Rick Lapointe, and forwards Mel Bridgman and Dan Lucas.

Saar was obtained in exchange for the rights to Ron Kolman, a 15-year-old forward from Prince George who was cut from camp earlier. Last year, Cougars dealt Brian Day, Ron Poole and McLaren to Kamloops in exchange for Saar but the goaltender refused to report to Victoria.

Ginnell dropped 15-year-old Steve Amiss of Quesnel from the roster Monday night and still has seven goalies on hand. In addition to Saar, Rogers and Anweiller, Cougars have Gerry Simpson of Saskatoon, Bob Leslie of Regina, Frank Berry of Creston and Vic Malli of Nanaimo trying out for goal.

"I don't think goaltending will be a problem this season," said Ginnell after announcing Saar's acquisition.

ICE CHIPS: Jack Durston, Ginnell's choice to coach the affiliate Nanaimo team in the B.C. Junior League, checked in Monday and is helping the Cougar mentor with training camp duties . . . Six players, including a pair from Alaska, checked in for tryouts . . . Victoria fans will get a chance to size up all the prospects when an intra-squad game is played Wednesday at Memorial Arena, starting at 6:45 p.m.

Viking Cuts a Dog-Gone Shame

BASKETBALL REJECT . . . couldn't shoot

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

University of Victoria Vikings opened their pre-season basketball camp Monday at the UVic gym and attracted 47 players and two dogs.

Coach Gary Taylor didn't recruit the pooches — they wandered in through an open door — but one of them showed plenty of promise. If had to be chased out three times.

That's the kind of determination Taylor is looking for during the coming Canada West men's basketball season but even so, the canines were the first to be cut from the squad.

"I realize they were fast," Taylor admitted after the 1½-hour workout, "but you've got to remember they've got two extra legs."

They weren't too hot at shooting or rebounding, either.

Several of the human candidates impressed, however, as Taylor ran them through a series of running, passing and shooting exercises.

Taylor was especially pleased with Lorne Dakin, a six-foot-five forward from Terrace.

"I've only seen him in one practice," he said, "but he's the best looking freshman prospect I've seen in the three years I've been with the Vikings. He's definitely going to help us, no two ways about it."

Vikings can use some help. They've lost two of their most aggresive starting forwards from last season's team that finished tied for third place in the Canada West conference with a 9-11 won-lost record.

Back are forwards Lee Edmondson, Pard Hogwied, Jim Duddridge and Dave Mulcahy and guards Gordie Hoshal and Bert Zethof.

Other newcomers hoping to crack the lineup include Tim Carlson, Rob Parris and Evan Jones from Oak Bay Bays, provincial high school champs the last two seasons, Kerry Short from Vic High and Doug Mosher from Mount Doug.

Taylor also liked the looks of Homer Hamm, a 6-1 guard from Kamloops, and Kelly Stinson, a 5-10 guard from Cowichan Secondary in Duncan.

The camp, starting a week earlier than last year, will continue through Saturday from 4:30 to 6 p.m. After that Taylor and UVic Jayvee coach Jack Newnham will trim the squad to 24 or 25.

The annual inter-squad game takes place the first week in November with the grad game a week later. Vikings have a tough assignment in the schedule openers Nov. 15 and 16. They're at Edmonton against Alberta Golden Bears, last year's champs.

WINGS, GRIFFINS TANGLE IN FINAL

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia Wings and Rochester Griffins will meet Thursday in the opening game of the best-of-seven National Lacrosse League playoff final.

Wings qualified on Monday by topping Maryland Arrows, 13-12, before 6,229 fans in Landover, Md., to win the best-of-seven semi-final series four games to two.

Rochester reached the final Saturday night with an 18-10 win over the Quebecois before 10,594 fans in Montreal. Griffins won the series, 4-2.

PARKLAND ENJOYS TASTE OF SUCCESS

Parkland Panthers scratched up their first victory of the season Monday night, ending a long drought in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

Mike Nauss hammered in three consecutive goals to lead Panthers to a 4-2 decision over visiting Esquimalt Dockers and gave the host club its first win since joining the league at the start of last season.

In other matches, Reynolds Roadrunners tripped visiting Belmont Braves 9-0 and Oak Bay took over second place with a 6-1 victory over host Claremont Spartans.

Parkland dropped its first two games this season to last year's playoff finalists — losing by a narrow 4-3 margin to Mt. Douglas and dropping a 7-1 decision to Roadrunners.

The Panthers, with eight goals in three games, have already equalled their output last season, when they lost all 16 encounters and finished with a 8-102 goals-for-and-against record.

Nauss then started off the second half with two goals and clubmate Shane Griffey added an insurance tally.

League-leading scorer Greg Booth hammered in three more goals to give Roadrunners a 7-0 lead at half time and boost his individual total for three games to nine. Drew Finerty added two goals and singles were scored by Jim McHaffie, Keith Bridge, Mike Dominique and Richard Gurney.

Grant Olson powered the Oak Bay squad to victory with a three-goal output while singles were chipped in by Paul Monaghan, Steve Farrell and Ed Jackson. Gordie Horth averted a shutout for Claremont.

Title Battle Delayed Until Late in October

NEW YORK (AP) — The George Foreman-Muhammad Ali heavyweight championship fight, set for Sept. 25 in Kinshasha, Zaire, has been postponed until either Oct. 23 or Oct. 30, the fight promoters announced today.

Hank Schwartz, vice-president of Video Techniques, the fight promoters, said an announcement of the exact date of the fight will be made in several days by the government of Zaire.

Schwartz said Ali and Foreman will remain in Zaire to train for the fight, which had been scheduled for Sept. 25, 6:45 PDT, until Foreman received a cut over his eye on Monday.

"The fight is on," Schwartz said. He called Foreman's eye cut an unfortunate incident which has "put us behind by a month."

KINSHASHA, Zaire (AP) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman's cut eye was described today as deep and serious, and the most favorable prognosis for a resumption of training for his title fight against Muhammad Ali involved two weeks rest.

A source described the gash that led to the postponement of the scheduled Sept. 25 championship fight as more than an inch long.

Three butterfly bandages, a kind of adhesive that binds layers of skin together, were used to close the horizontal gash between Foreman's right eye and eyebrow.

While Foreman rested at his villa today playing cards and walking his dog, his manager Dick Sadler, the fight promoters, a representative of Ali and Zaire officials were working out a statement on how long the postponement will be.

A Zaire government official had promised there would be an official announcement on the status of the fight some time today.

Because of continuing competition of the baseball pennant races and the football season in the United States, there were several problems to resolve in order to assure that the closed-circuit broadcast of the fight, its main revenue source, would be protected.

A group of Zaire doctors visited Foreman today, but the bandages over the injury were not removed.

Ottawa Back Out for Year

Not only are the defending Grey Cup champions mired in the Canadian Football League eastern conference cellar with Toronto Argonauts, they now have lost their premier running back for the remainder of the season.

Jim Evenson had his right knee operated on Sunday for ligament damage suffered in the third quarter of a 16-9 loss to Calgary Stampeders. He had just signed a two-year contract with the club.

The loss left the Riders with only three wins in nine games.

On top of that, general manager Frank Clair reports that Gene Foster, cut by the club last week, will not return to replace Evenson.

And, if that isn't enough, only one of a series of players expected in camp after being cut by various National Football League teams is here.

He is Paul Olson, a defensive lineman set free by Chicago Bears.

Clubs, Brandon Tie

BRANDON (CP) — Winnipeg Clubs and Brandon Wheat Kings tied 3-3 Monday night in their first exhibition game of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League season. Clubs, behind the scoring of Dale Baumgartner, Kelly Greenbank and Mike Floch, took period leads of 2-1 and 3-2 in the rough game that saw 29 penalties handed out.

Rutledge Top Golfer On Jr. Tour

Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill, the city junior champion, collected first place in the inaugural junior tour which ended Sunday on his home course.

Rutledge fired a five-over-par 70 in the final round to finish with 181 points in the six-match competition. Another Cedar Hill golfer, Roy Harrington, finished runner-up with 166 and was followed by Russell Reynolds of Uplands (147), Darrell Fink of Gorge Vale (142) and Ian Seymour of Gorge Vale (136).

Just No Rest for Mike

By The Associated Press

Andy Messersmith, the Los Angeles Dodgers' big winner, apparently thinks that one day off for Mike Marshall, the team's ace relief pitcher, is too much. And manager Walt Alston tends to agree.

Although the Dodgers were holding a four-run lead over Houston Astros after seven innings Monday night, Alston brought in his durable right-hander to preserve Messersmith's 18th victory.

"If Mike doesn't pitch, he gets rusty sitting around—and angry," Messersmith quipped after the Dodgers won 7-2 and maintained their 2½-game lead over Cincinnati Reds in the National League West pennant race. "He hadn't worked since Saturday."

The Reds, meanwhile, battered San Diego Padres 9-2 for their seventh victory in eight games. The Dodgers have 15 games remaining and Cincinnati 14.

In other NL games, Montreal Expos and New York Mets split 3e2 decisions in a doubleheader and San Francisco Giants defeated Atlanta Braves 4-2.

In the only American League game, Minnesota Twins trounced Kansas City Royals 7-2.

Marshall now has appeared in 96 games—four more than the major league record he set last season with Montreal. He has finished 76 games, one short of the major league mark set by Milwaukee's Ken Sanders in 1971. And he is the NL leader in earned run average. Only one other relief pitcher—Hoyt Wilhelm of the old New York Giants in 1952—ever won the ERA crown, finishing with a 2.43 mark.

He alowed ony one baserunner—on a walk. Over the season, he has worked 189 1-3 innings and permitted 173 hits, and has a ratio of 129 strikeouts to only 46 walks.

The Dodgers capitalized on some sloppy Houston play, including four errors, one hit batsman, one wild pitch and one passed ball, for most of their runs. Bill Buckner and Lee Lacy each had two hits and scored twice for Los Angeles.

Cincinnati had 13 hits, including consecutive homers by Dan Driessen and Cesar Geronimo in a four-run third inning, in punishing San Diego. Geronimo, Dave Concepcion and Johnny Bench each drove in two Cincinnati runs. Bench's two RBIs gave him 107 for the season and sole possession of the NL lead.

The Expos tied their club record of eight consecutive victories by winning the opener, overcoming a 2-1 deficit on Ron Woods' two-run single in the seventh inning off Jerry Koosman, 13-10.

In the nightcap, the Mets won behind the four-hit pitching of Randy Sterling and Tug McGraw. Sterling, in his first major league appearance, held the Expos hitless until the sixth, when Montreal scored its two runs.

Twins' Manager Returns in '75

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Twins president Calvin Griffith announced Monday he had rehired manager Frank Quilici for the 1975 American League baseball season.

Griffith said he was impressed with the improvement Quilici has shown as manager this year and thinks it reflects the improvement the Twins have shown on the field in recent weeks.

Quilici's job appeared in jeopardy in mid-June when the team fell 14 games below .500.

However, the Twins have won eight of their last nine games and were 16 games above .500 since mid-June and are in third place in the West Division, 8½ games behind first-place Oakland A's going into Monday night's game against Kansas City Royals.

Foster Retires As Champ

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Bob Foster, world light-heavyweight boxing champion, retired Monday after 14 successful title defences, saying he doesn't want to battle the world sanctioning bodies.

"It's time to retire, I guess," said the 34-year-old Foster. "I still think I can lick any light-heavyweight in the world, but it's too much of a mental thing to fight the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council, too."

Yacht Loser Vows Return

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The challenge for the America's Cup reached a climax today. If the Australians don't gain their first victory in the 1974 best-of-seven series, it will be all over and the United States will have made another successful defence in four straight races.

But win or lose, Alan Bond, owner of the Australian 12-metre Southern Cross, vowed he will be back again, after Southern Cross lost its third race to Courageous, the U.S. yacht, on Monday.

Bond said he would like to be given access "to the same sails and other materials" which the American boat is using.

The rules say both challenger and defender must use sails made in their own country.

Courageous uses sails from the lofts of Ted Hood, her skipper, and most yachting observers say they are cut better and give the boat the little advantage which enables her to gain time on each of the six legs of the 24.3-mile course on Rhode Island Sound.

Australia's loss in the third race was the worst of the series. The golden-hulled challenger was 5:27 behind when she crossed the line after the shiny white American yacht.

After a start in which the two boats edged over the starting line ahead of the gun and were recalled to begin again, Courageous was first over the initial weather marker by 45 seconds, boosted that to 1:25 at the second, then dropped to a lead of 1:16 at the third.

Courageous' lead at the fourth marker was 2:52 and at the fifth it was 3:32. Then the Americans simply sailed away with the last leg.

Courageous won by the biggest margin since 1967 when the American Intrepid crossed the finish line by a margin of 5:58 over another Australian, Dame Pattie.

Bond insists his boat goes better in strong winds, up to 20 knots. But the forecast for today was for 10-25 knot winds over the course for the fourth race.

City CRTC Aid Essential-Pollen

Mayor Peter Pollen criticized the Canadian Radio-Television Commission Monday for holding hearings in Vancouver, rather than Victoria, on applications for the renewal of broadcasting licences by three local radio stations, and one television station.

Pollen said he was "most disturbed" to learn from newspaper advertisements that the Oct. 22 hearings would not be held in Victoria, to provide all interested groups and individuals an opportunity to present their views.

"I believe radio and television in this community are of such low standard that community input would be of great benefit, indeed essential, to these hearings," he said.

The CRTC will hear applications for licence renewal from CFAX radio station, Capital Broadcasting System Ltd. for its CKDA and CFMS-FM stations, and CHEK-TV Ltd.

The radio stations' licences expire March 31 and CHEK's licence expires Jan. 9, 1975.

Pollen recalled his earlier criticism of the CRTC some two years ago, for holding a hearing in Edmonton on an application for a rate increase by Victoria Cablevision Ltd.

Now the commission is again holding an out-of-town session, he said, thus underlining its "almost total lack of sensitivity" to the community's wishes and its "aggressive policy" of denying listeners and viewers the full opportunity to be heard.

Pollen said the city has asked the CRTC to hear the applications here, "so that interested parties cannot only participate, but see how justice is supposed to be done."

Commercial Fisherman Rescued

A spokesman for the Victoria Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the man, whose identity was not known, had been going to shore to get gasoline for his fishing boat.

He was transferred to an RCMP boat and taken to hospital.

Few Reply to Ford's Amnesty Offer

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Ford's limited amnesty plan has apparently drawn few inquiries from draft evaders or deserters and no early confirmed reports of any takers.

The United States justice department said 10 persons identifying themselves as evaders or deserters called seeking information during the first 12 hours after amnesty was announced.

Initial reaction to the proposal was predictable. War resisters said it didn't go far enough and veterans groups said it went too far.

Draft evaders and deserters living in exile called the proposal unacceptable because it implied guilt on the part of those who had spurned involvement in what they viewed as an immoral war.

Veterans groups and some relatives of Vietnam casualties were just as vehement in their opposition, calling it a betrayal of those who had fought and died in Southeast Asia.

Once a draft evader or deserter takes the first step toward accepting the conditional amnesty offer, there is no turning back.

He is not free to negotiate, for example, how long he will work in a public service job. He can cite reasons why he should serve fewer than the 24-month maximum, but if he is unhappy with the time decided on by the local U.S. Attorney or his former military branch there is no established route of appeal. Refusal to serve probably would result in prosecution for the original offence.

Officials say an evader or deserter living in Canada should call or write before reporting. They caution that some men might be ineligible for the program, and instead of starting a public service job might find themselves under arrest. Some might have been legally charged outside the period covered by the program — Aug. 4, 1964, to March 28, 1973. Others may be accused of crimes in addition to draft evasion or desertion.

Draft evaders may telephone the justice department at 202-739-4281.

For military absentees, the following numbers were given by the White House:

Coast guard: 202-426-1830.

Military absentees who have no other charges pending against them also may seek instruction by writing to:

Army: U.S. Army Deserter Information Point, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. 46216.

$14M Indian Mill Deal Finalized

Final agreements between the provincial government and Burns Lake area Indians were signed Monday for the $14 million Babine Forest Products sawmill project.

Under the terms of the agreement, negotiated several months ago, the native people will have an eight per cent share in Babine, along with Weldwood of Canada (44 per cent), Eurocan (24 per cent) and CanCel (24 per cent).

The Indians will be involved in all the activities of the new sawmill, including membership on the board of directors, and will be alloted eight per cent of the chip production to sell at their discretion.

Under the comprehensive development agreement, a $500,000 loan will be granted the native population to fund and develop subsidiary and support industries in the Burns Lake area. Other provincial funds will be available for community-oriented programs.

BROADCASTERS RAP REPORT

People in B.C. don't want to be educated when they sit down to watch TV, they want to be entertained, according to the B.C. Association of Broadcasters.

In a letter to Transport Minister Robert Strachan, the association, headed by Mel Cooper, of C-FAX, rapped a report urging establishment of a new communications system for the province as "misleading, superficial and unfair."

The system envisaged by Clark would have been similar to the public TV network in the U.S. providing programs similar to those seen on Channel 9 from Seattle.

"The reality is that people out of the cities want a standard as close as possible to that existing in the cities," Cooper said.

They want "what is glibly dismissed by Clark — himself a former broadcaster — as communication pollution," he added.

The association urged instead of the system proposed by Clark a province-wide microwave network capable of pulling cable-TV to every populated part of the province.

Flaws Found In Olympic Coin Series

MONTREAL (CP) — Austin Page, director of the coin program for the 1976 Olympic Games, said Monday between three and five million $5 silver Olympic coins have been minted with slight flaws in the design.

The coins, part of the second series of Olympic coins, depict the Olympic symbol of five interconnecting rings but do not have the rings linked in the usual fashion, he said.

The difference was so slight only trained eyes could detect the flaws.

"I'm sure these designs were carefully checked when the original sketches were approved, so I'm not sure if this involved one die or the whole series," he said at a news conference to launch sales of the second series.

"I'll have to check into it when I get back to Ottawa to see what it means. We have already minted between three and four million of the total second series of nine million coins."

Page said they "should have the full nine million out of the way by the end of October."

"And then we hope to get the third series out of the way by the end of December, or very early in the new year."

The second series are more expensive than the first, with a $5 coin selling for $7.50, an increase of $1.50, and a $10 coin selling for $15, up $3, from the first.

Math Boring, Outdated Says Experts

EDMONTON (CP) — The mathematics curriculum used in high schools is irrelevant, boring and outdated, say two experts who are working af bringing the subject down to earth.

Prof. Alan Madgett and Peter Weygang are conducting an 18-month national survey which they hope will result in the design of a modern, practical high school mathematics curriculum.

Madgett, assistant professor of mathematics at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., and Weygang, head of mathematics at the Levack, Ont. district high school, are interviewing government, industry, business and education department leaders to determine attitudes.

The current survey follows their broad spectrum mathematics project, now three years old, in Ontario which relies heavily on applications in the social sciences, professional areas and industrial fields.

In operation only at Levack, that project compares with the traditional final-year Ontario high school math program "designed primarily for students planningg on careers in mathematics or the physical sciences," Weygang said in an interview.

Madgett said "90 per cent of university mathematics professors can't tell you how much math is used outside the university's doors."

"Mathematics text books 50 years ago were a lot more relevant at that time than today's math books are," Weygang said.

UN WORKLOAD HEAVY

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations General Assembly opens its 29th annual session today with a record number of problems facing a record number of members.

The first day's agenda included the admission of three new members: Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan; Grenada, a former British island colony in the Caribbean; and Guinea-Bissau, the first of Portugal's African colonies to get independence.

Their admission brings the total membership in the world organization to 138. It started with 51 in 1945.

President Ford planned to appear before the assembly Wednesday for the first major foreign-policy speech of his administration. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim told a news conference Monday that "the fact that the president is coming here personally is the best proof of his positive attitude toward our organization."

A record 111 items are on the agenda for the three-month assembly session. Many of them are the result of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the energy crisis, the arms race, worldwide inflation and the widening gap between rich and poor countries.

Waldheim said many of the problems are of unusual international complexity, demanding a global rather than a national approach. But returning to a theme he has sounded often the last month, he said that in the nearly three years he has been secretary-general, the trend has been "not toward better international co-operation but rather a trend back again to nationalism."

He urged governments to show "more give and take" and willingness to "give up some of their selfish interests and be ready to co-operate on an international basis."

He said that failure to do this was "the main reason we failed to achieve a breakthrough" at the UN conferences on the environment, the law of the sea and population problems.

The 28th General Assembly, which started a year ago, adjourned late Monday after meeting for an hour of speeches praising its president, Leopoldo Benites of Ecuador. The assembly had remained in session technically so that it could meet quickly if action on the Arab-Israeli conflict was required.

Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika is to be president of the new assembly. The 37-year-old former revolutionary is the choice of the Asian-African bloc, whose turn it is to nominate the president.

Waste Gas Cut In Water Scare

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency plans to cut drastically the 200 million pounds of vinyl chloride escaping into the air from industrial plants and to determine whether any of the cancer-causing chemical threatens U.S. drinking water supplies.

The agency announced the actions Monday in releasing a report on the vinyl chloride problem. The report was prepared by a task force set up earlier this year following disclosure of several deaths among workers exposed to the chemical at vinyl chloride plants.

The report concluded there is no scientific evidence to indicate air pollution from vinyl chloride plants poses an "imminent hazard to people living near these plants."

But, EPA administrator Russell E. Train told a news conference, "it is clear that some hazard does exist, and that our population deserves the protection afforded by regulatory action."

Train said it would take from nine months to one year to draw up rules designed to cut down such air pollution. The report estimated that emissions from the 15 vinyl chloride plants around the country could be reduced by 90 per cent, with a 75 per cent reduction in the 37 plants where polyvinyl chloride is made. Vinyl chloride is the basic gas, while polyvinyl chloride is the solid form used for an almost endless variety of consumer products.

The EPA said it is still investigating whether it can apply similar rules to the estimated 8,000 plants where polyvinyl chloride is turned into those end products.

To date there have been 25 cases around the world of a rare but fatal form of liver cancer in workers exposed to vinyl chloride. In addition there are several reports of deaths of persons who lived in the vicinity of the plants, though a direct causal connection has not been established.

The report said drinking water supplies should be studied to see if those near vinyl chloride plants are contaminated. Glenn Schweitzer, head of the EPA's office of toxic substances, said the agency has no reason to believe there is currently a hazard in drinking water, but "as a matter of prudence" wants to be sure.

The chemical could be entering water supplies downstream from plants or possibly from polyvinyl chloride liners used inside pipes or tanks carrying drinking water.

Soviets Soft-Peddle Souvenirs

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviets have traditionally tended to wear their pride on their coat lapels, but the custom of issuing pins for every honor, landmark and event seems to be getting out of hand.

Vast sums of money are being wasted on souvenir pins which either celebrate trivia or misrepresent the wearer as a hero, the Communist party newspaper Pravda said Monday.

The issuance of these badges is growing catastrophically," said the article by satirist I. Shatunovsky.

During the last 15 months, 15 million badges — honoring factories and stores, sports events, anniversaries and memorials — were produced at a cost of $4.6 million, the article said, and outlays for 46 million badges of all kinds have already been projected by 99 plants for this year.

"The supply is meeting the demand," Pravda said. "Unless strict control it put on production of these items, the waste will continue to rise."

The article singled out for ridicule the issuance of badges for such events as the annual regional barbers' meeting and the third anniversary of the construction of a water tower.

As an example of wasting expensive metal for a cheap purpose, Pravda told of the award issued by one sanitation workers' union for its "best plumber" — a silver lapel badge in the shape of a toilet seat.

Industrial Wages Up 1.5%

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings in July were $178.73, up 1.5 per cent from June, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The average is for workers in all industries except agriculture, fishing, trapping, government service, education and domestic service and the July figures are based on early returns of wage surveys.

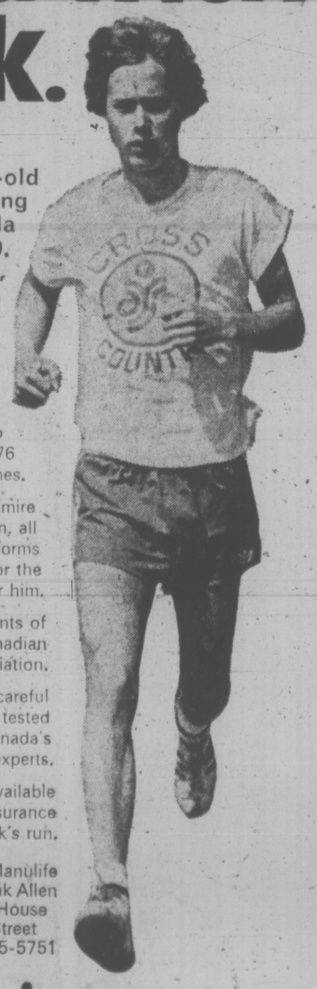
The July average was 12.3 per cent higher than the average for July, 1973.

The June-to-July gain in the consumer price index was eight-tenths of one per cent and the index was 11.3 per cent higher in July of this year compared with the same month a year ago.

Workers in forestry had the largest percentage gain comparing July and June and miners were the only ones to show a decline.

Averages by industry division and increase over June were: Forestry, $208.77, up 2.2 per cent; mining, $233.67, down two-tenths of one per cent; manufacturing, $183.90, up four-tenths of one per cent; construction, $250.75, up 1.3 per cent; transportation, communication and other utilities, $202.38, up six-tenths of one per cent; trade, $144.66, up 1.8 per cent; finance, insurance and real estate, $175.86, up 1.6 per cent; and service, $129.03, up 1.8 per cent.

Run across Canada with Mark.



Mark Kent, a 17-year-old Toronto athlete, started running about 4,000 miles across Canada from Victoria, B.C. on June 29. He expects to be in St. John's, Nfld. in October.

He's doing it because it's never been done before. And while he's running, he wants to raise money for the Olympic Trust of Canada, to help Canadian athletes prepare for the 1976 Olympic Games.

Mark's doing the hard part. If you admire his spirit and share his conviction, all you have to do is get mileage pledge forms and ask your friends, neighbors or the people you work with, to sponsor him.

Receipts for tax deductible amounts of $5 or more will be issued by the Canadian Olympic Association.

The mileage pledge forms are available through The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, which is sponsoring Mark's run.

Writer Sentenced in Leningrad

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Mikhail Heifitz, a history teacher and writer, has been sentenced in Leningrad to four years in a labor camp and two years of exile on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, dissident sources said here. Earlier last week, physicist Andrei Sakharov said Heifitz was accused of writing a preface to a clandestine collection of verse by exiled poet Josef Brodsky.

Polly Lost His Head

BROCKENHURST — A crowd of drinkers chased a man through this west England village after he bit off the head of a parrot.

Magistrate's court heard Monday how Richard Butler, 24, was bitten on the finger while playing with Wilfred, mascot of the village pub. He pulled the 21-year-old bird from its cage, bit off its head, placed its remains on the bar and calmly walked out.

He was pursued by an angry crowd and hid in a public toilet.

Found guilty of destroying the parrot, he was remanded in custody for psychiatric reports.

KITCHENER, Ont. — Governments which seek to find peaceful co-existence with Communist powers are merely serving Soviet interests, Juanita Castro, sister of Cuban premier Fidel Castro, told a meeting here Monday night.

Miss Castro, 41, recommended that Canadian business break its connection with Cuba, saying it was the only way Canadian businessmen can "fight against tyranny" in the Cuban regime.

Miss Castro has been denouncing her brother since she chose exile 10 years ago — first in Mexico and later in Miami where she runs a small gift shop.

HAMPTON
. . . condition fair

NEW YORK — Bandleader Lionel Hampton, 61, was reported in fair condition today in Mt. Sinai Hospital's intensive care unit. He was hospitalized Thursday with internal bleeding.

"He has had massive internal bleeding," his physician, Dr. Lawrence Werther, said Monday. "The bleeding has been controlled and his condition is good. The tests that have been done have ruled out malignancy."

PITTSBURGH — A Pittsburgh woman who used a fertility drug gave birth to quadruplets Monday — three boys and a girl.

All weighed more than three pounds and were reported under guarded condition in hospital here.

Doctors said the infants, born to Mr. and Mrs. Donald West, have developed a lung ailment called hyaline membrane disease — common to babies born prematurely. All are expected to survive.

TORONTO — A Hungarian agricultural engineer left his country's official delegation to a food conference in Canada and went to immigration offices to defect, immigration department spokesmen said Monday.

Farkas Olah, 31, left during a side-trip to Niagara Falls on Sept. 9 and made the formal request to stay in Canada the next day when an interpreter was found, the spokesman said. The immigration department is considering Olah's request.

Minister Pays Out

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Instead of passing a plate for collection of offerings Sunday, Rev. David Finestead of the Lake Lotawana United Methodist church put $1,000 on the plate and asked his congregation to take the money to use for the Lord.

Members of the congregation left $291 and the 30-year-old pastor said it will be offered again next week.

"I think it was a total shock," he said. "It's so completely foreign to people to be taking money out of the collection plate. I have no idea who took what."

Finestead, who said the money was from his personal account, said he was following the Parable of the Talents.

Sheriffs Replace Police

Two B.C. government sheriffs moved into provincial court Monday to take over work previously the duty of police court officers.

The sheriffs, Philip Hollott, 54, and Hans Frederiksen, 27, finished a nine-week justice training course at Burnaby last week.

Hollott has worked in jails since 1952, including a 11-year period as governor of a jail at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Frederiksen worked during the past four years as a clerk for B.C. Forest Service in Victoria.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An elderly man who thought stealing would be easy, pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Monday to a charge of shoplifting.

James Preece, 66, of 6722 Welch, made the comment after he and his wife, Deena, 68, were apprehended Saturday for stealing a letter plate worth $9.99 and a lock valued at $12 from Simpsons-Sears department store, 3190 Shelbourne. Mrs. Preece also pleaded guilty.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said Mrs. Preece was seen by security staff to put the plate in her purse then leave the store.

She returned and received from her husband the lock, which she also put in her purse.

Mrs. Preece left the store both times without paying for the items.

Judge Willaim Ostler fined Preece $200 and gave Mrs. Preece a suspended sentence and six months' probation.

"We're sorry. We'll never do it again," Mrs. Preece said.

In another case of shoplifting from Simpsons-Sears, Betty Ann Jarvinen, 23, of Sooke, was given a suspended sentence and three months' probation for taking dice and marbles from a game.

She explained that the dice and marbles had been missing from a game she had bought two weeks earlier.

Asked by Ostler why she had not taken the game back and asked for a refund, she replied, "I should have done that."

A 26-year-old man charged with dangerous use of a firearm was remanded in custody to Oct. 8 for mental observation at Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

Murray L. Wiggins, of 1510 Mount Douglas Cross Road, was charged after a shooting incident Friday in which rifle shots were fired in the direction of two youths in the Mount Douglas area.

★ ★ ★

Remy A. Gatto, 28, of 3272 Shelley, was remanded to Friday for election of trial method on a charge of breaking into an apartment in the 3200-block Cook Saturday and committing rape.

Gatto was released in his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000.

Preliminary hearing into a two-count charge against three persons of theft by conversion from the London Boxing and Athletic Club of Victoria and its women's auxiliary began Monday.

Harold and Ivy Morris and Stanley Richardson, all of 1127 Chapman, were charged May 2 with theft by conversion of about $2,475 from the club Feb. 15, 1971, to Dec. 31, 1972, and of about $795 from its women's auxiliary Jan. 15 to Oct. 15, 1972.

The hearing is expected to last five days and hear from 25 to 30 witnesses.

★ ★ ★

In drug cases, Phillip Pollard, 17, of 619 Oliver, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for possessing marijuana, and Sterling Alfred Haugen, 18, of 990 Cloverdale, was fined $75 for possessing cannabis resin.

★ ★ ★

For impaired driving, Kenneth Dennis, 26, of 1756 Coronation, and Gordon Kent Smyth, 37, of 6704 Buena Vista, were each fined $350.

Michael Jackman, 18, of Work Point Barracks, was fined $250 for driving with a blood-alcohol level of more than .08 per cent.

Lost Gold Turns Up Next Door

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Monday 670 ounces of gold reported missing from a safety deposit box in a downtown Vancouver bank was discovered in another deposit box in a bank next door.

Martin Anderson, 42, of Seattle, told police he discovered Sept. 6 that someone had forged his name to the safety deposit box and walked off with his gold.

Anderson told police he had paid $120 an ounce in June, 1973, for the gold. At current prices of about $157 an ounce, its value would be $100,000.

Police said Monday the gold is being held and the case is still being investigated. Charges could be laid.

Search Off For Missing Swimmer

RCMP have officially cancelled a full-scale search for David Lindsay, last seen on the beach of Hernando Island the afternoon of Sept. 1, less than an hour before he was to be picked up by two brothers who were skin diving on nearby Twin Island.

The RCMP marine division, a helicopter, tracking dog, ground searchers and a special party organized by the man's father failed to turn up a trace of him other than some clothing he apparently left on the beach.

George Smith Jr., son of the caretaker on privately-owned Hernando Island, said he spoke to Lindsay about 3:15 p.m., having met him walking on the beach. Lindsay was to have been picked up by his brothers at 4 p.m. when they returned to Savary Island where the group was camped. Lindsay failed to show at the rendezvous.

Police said Lindsay agreed to meet the speedboat on a point of Hernando where he had been left to hike while the others drove. It appeared he tried to swim more than a mile to Savary and became a victim of strong currents.

College Strike Off for Talks

VANCOUVER — Classes were back to normal at Vancouver Community College Monday night after Labor Minister Bill King appointed Dr. Noel Hall of the University of B.C. to look into an eight-month contract dispute between the college council and vocational instructors.

Karl Gregg, president of the Vocational Instructors Association, whose members have been picketing Vancouver Vocational Institute, Vancouver School of Art, the college's Langara campus and its special programs division since Tuesday, said Monday the strike was over for the time being.

Pickets were lifted when King agreed to appoint an industrial inquiry commission to settle the dispute.

The labor minister said the college council and the Vocational Instructors Association (VIA) would decide whether it wanted the commission's settlement report to be binding.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A two-storey log house built by stulents of the college of New Caledonia sold for $68,300 to an anonymous bidder Saturday. The house was built on a city lot in a log construction course offered at the college and bursar Laurence Denter said the selling price was a break-even price.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP staff-sergeant Fred Bodnaruk said Monday the investigation into the murder of Colleen MacMillen, 16, of Lac La Hache is "back at square one." He said laboratory tests of hair samples found in a car abandoned near 100 Mile House showed hair found in the car did not match that of MacMillen.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief probation officer and city social planners have opposed a call by Mayor Art Phillips for tougher laws against juvenile lawbreakers.

Phillips told the news conference that vandalism and juvenile delinquency has reached the point in some areas of the city that residents are afraid to go out at night. He said he expects to soon recommend to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald that stronger laws against such offenders be adopted.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia will be getting another chance to decide on union representation within the next two weeks.

Circulars were distributed throughout the corporation Monday advising staff that another vote is pending.

Three groups have been wooing ICBC for representation — the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the B.C. Government Employees Union and the Office and Technical Employees Union. All three unions will be included on the forthcoming ballot.

★ ★ ★

The 200 workers, represented by the Canadian Mechanical and Allied workers, have been on strike since June 1.

KELOWNA (CP) — Noll Derriksan, a former chief of the Westbank Indian band here, said he will go to the B.C. court of appeal in a second attempt to quash a 1970 conviction under the Provincial Fisheries Act.

WILSON CAMPAIGNING, REJECTS COALITION

Times News Services

LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Wilson Monday night launched his bid for re-election by insisting that his Labor party ruling alone can pull Britain out of its economic crisis.

Firmly rejecting proposal for a national government embracing other parties, Wilson declared: "There will be no question of a coalition. You do not get determined government if there is trimming and deals going on all the time."

The 58-year-old premier thus sharply separated himself from his chief rivals. Both the Conservatives, led by Edward Heath, and the Liberal party of Jeremy Thorpe have appealed to the growing sentiment for a unity government here by leaving the door open to alliances with those outside their own ranks.

Wilson has not yet set the election date, but political informants said he would be making an announcement Wednesday or Thursday, scheduling the vote for Oct. 10.

The election would mark the second time in seven months Britain's voters have been called to the polls to pick a new parliament.

In the Feb. 28 election, Britons failed to give any party an overall majority in parliament, forcing Wilson to run the country with a shaky minority government.

"We now ask for the return of a Labor government, with a working majority, so we can continue to tackle the great problems facing Britain," said a Labor party manifesto released at Wilson's news conference.

Summing up its frankly socialist program, the manifesto said, "Our objective is to bring about a fundamental and irreversible shift in the balance of wealth and power in favor of working people and their families."

UVIC AWARDS

University of Victoria entrance awards totalling $7,500 have been won by 22 first year students, 14 of them from the Capital Region.

NO MILLIONS FOR TRUSTEES

No millionaires were uncovered by financial disclosure statements filed this week by Sooke and Saanich school board trustees.

In Saanich school board, chairman Rubymay Parrott disclosed she had shares in five companies, Blue Star Mines, Eaton Viking Fund Ltd., Port Dundas Grain, Tomatin Malt and Miltonduff-Glenlivit Malt.

She owns a lot on Ardmore next to the family home, where the domestic water supply well is situated. She has no income from companies and no creditors.

He owns a lot on Doumac.

Armstrong has shares in Pamour Porcupine Mines Ltd., Consolidated Fortune Channel Ltd., East Malartic Mines Ltd., Carolin Mines Ltd., Peerless Rug Ltd., Hart Mines Ltd., Dickinson Mines Ltd., Camflo Mines Ltd., Canada North West Land Ltd., Agnico Eagle Mines Ltd., Little Long Lac Mines Ltd., Van Silver Mines Ltd., Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd., Wharf Resources Ltd., and North Air Mines Ltd.

Walter Tangye has stocks in Alwin Mining Co. Ltd., Cuvier Mines Ltd., International Mogul Ltd., Nordev Resources Ltd., Rand Resources, Ltd., Riley Data Share International Ltd., United Accumulative Ltd., B.C. Teachers' Federation Co-Operative, and Royal Trust "M" Fund.

He listed no creditors, land holdings or income from companies.

Lois Walsh and Ann Foerster listed no stocks, income from companies, land or creditors.

In Sooke school board, chairman Alan Littler listed ownership of three lots, one on Fashoda Place and two on Happy Valley Rd.

He lists no stocks, creditors or income from a company.

Ron Fitton, owner of Ron's Radio and TV Service, owns six lots in the Sooke area, four of them at Norton and Sooke Rd.

He has no stocks or creditors.

Noel Haas is owner-operator of Haaswood Canine Country Club, a breeding and boarding kennels. She lists Royal Bank of Canada and GMAC as creditors, and owns a lot at 4339 Happy Valley Rd., site of the kennels.

No Surprises From Directors

In the briefest statement of all, View Royal director Patricia Massy wrote N-A (non-applicable) to all sections — companies in which she holds more than one share; business that is financially remunerating for services performed as employee, officer, owner or part-owner; creditors; and land holdings.

The statements were filed by six of the seven CRD directors outside municipal boundaries. The seventh, Ron Dumont of Sooke, has not filed his disclosure.

Reached at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention in Vernon today, Dumont said regional district executive director Dennis Young has his disclosure. Young also is in Vernon.

Dumont added that his disclosure says nothing. "It's all nil," he said.

Board chairman Jim Campbell disclosed he holds more than one share in Rampart Mines, a small Vancouver-based company holding an option on gold-silver-base metal prospect at Lytton, according to a report on mines.

He declared his Saturna Island farm, of which he is owner-operator, as a financially-remunerating business. His only creditor is the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and his land holding was given as a fractional quarter on Saturna.

Colwood director Dick Emery, an electrical contractor, listed his business — E. H. Emery Electric Limited, 740 Princess Avenue, of which he is manager, and Princess Holdings Limited, of which he is director. The holding company rents the premises to the electric company.

His land holding was restricted to 740 Princess Avenue and companies in which he holds one or more shares were his contracting company and the holding company. He has no creditors.

Salt Spring Island director George Heinekey declared he has 500 shares of Consolidated Beaumont and 10 shares of Bank of B.C.

His business interests include a federal licence for a magazine for sale of explosives in the Gulf Islands and sale of eggs from Claremont Poultry on a commission basis to stores on Salt Spring. He has no creditors or land holdings.

Langford director Earl Pallister had one creditor, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, and land holdings of four sections on Millstream Road.

Metchosin director Ken Rainey wrote Nil to all sections of the disclosure except land holdings, where he listed two lots in Metchosin.

Phillips Files Lengthy Disclosure

Among MLAs whose financial disclosures had not been received by the clerk of the legislature by noon Monday, backbencher Socred Don Phillips (South Peace River) filed the most lengthy disclosure.

Phillips has a 60 per cent share of Aspol Motors Ltd. and also holds shares in Capricorn Enterprises Ltd.

He is a director of both those companies and receives remuneration from them as well as receiving remuneration from H.S.P. Enterprises as a partner and Webb's Mens Wear Ltd. as a director.

Aspol, the only company in which Phillips listed a major interest, operates the Ford franchise dealership in Dawson Creek and has one wholly-owned but inactive subsidiary — Aspol Motors U-Drive.

Aspol owns three lots of land and has two major creditors — Ford Motor Company Credit Ltd., and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Phillips also listed five separate land holdings of his own in Dawson Creek and Chetwyn and five creditors, including the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Lake View Credit Union, Royal Bank of Canada and Trader's Finance Ltd.

Columbia River Social Credit MLA Jim Chabot listed himself as a director of Roja Holdings Ltd. and disclosed share holdings in 10 firms: Albany Gas and Oil Ltd., Bank of B.C., Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil, Coseka Resources Ltd., Kaiser Resources Ltd., Northern and Central Gas Corp., VanDer Hout Assoc., Fruit Growers Mutual Insurance Co., Investors Growth Fund and United Venture Fund.

Chabot listed one land holding in Invermere.

Pat Jordan, Socred MLA for North Okanagan, disclosed she is a director of Renata Holdings Ltd. and listed five companies in which she holds shares.

Those holdings are: Balco, 100 shares. House of Stein, 300 shares; Great Pacific Industries, 100 shares; Athabasca Columbia Resources Ltd., 400 shares; and Giant Mascot Mines, 100 shares.

Jordan listed four properties in which she holds an interest and two creditors — the Roval Bank and the Bank of Montreal.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) disclosed holdings in Great West Life Assurance Company, which paid him as an underwriter; Sikanni Investments Ltd.; Pinnacle Petroleum Ltd.; and Iron Bay Trust Ltd.

On the NDP side of the house, Vancouver-Burrard MLA Rosemary Brown filed the longest list of holdings, with shares in six firms.

Those holdings include: Daymore Ltd., B.C. Sugar, Electrohome, Bank of Nova Scotia, Woodward Stores and Thermo-Images.

Brown also listed land holdings on Lasqueti and Ruxton Islands.

Dewdney NDP MLA Peter Rolston listed share holdings in five companies: Brameda Resources, Brunswick Mining, Rayor Mines, Pacific U.S. Fund, and W. H. Carson Ltd.

Other backbenchers filed the following disclosures:

Alex Fraser (SC—Cariboo) listed holdings in three companies: John Fraser and Co. Ltd., F. and W. Truck and Equipment Ltd. and F. and W. Truck and Equipment Rentals Ltd.

Bob McClelland (SC—Langley) listed shares in Potter Distilleries Ltd. and one creditor — Toronto Dominion Bank.

Frank Richter (SC—Boundary-Similkameen) listed holdings in Fruit Growers' Mutual Insurance Company and one land holding in the Similkameen area.

Roy Cummings (NDP—Vancouver-Little Mountain) listed a 50 per cent share in a Dairy Queen outlet and one property in Coquitlam.

Harold Stevens (NDP—Richmond) disclosed an interest in Steves Holdings (the family farm), Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association, Surrey Co-operative Association, Richmond Savings Credit Union and West Coast Savings Credit Union.

Doug Kelly (NDP—Omineca) listed one land holding in the Coast district; one creditor — Frank and Wilhelmine Keesling in Hollywood, Calif., and one company paying him for services — Doug Kelly Logging.

Don Lewis (NDP—Shuswap) disclosed shares in Mainline Co-operative and Noca Dairies, property comprising his farm and three farm creditors — Farm Credit Corporation, Industrial Development Bank and B.C. department of agriculture (for land clearing).

Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) listed major shares in Tabor Enterprises Ltd., a company he said has been inactive since its inception. He also disclosed two land holdings, one in Metchosin and one in New Westminster.

Chris D'Arcy (NDP—Rossland-Trail) disclosed share holdings in Canadian Cellulose and Eatons and creditors, Castlegar Savings Credit Union and the Bank of Montreal.

Daisy Webster (NDP—Vancouver South) listed holdings in Canada Savings Bonds, B.C. Teachers Credit Union and Royal Bank savings account.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) listed three creditors— Bank of Montreal, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the federal income tax department.

NORTHERN RESOURCES DISCUSSED

TOKYO (AP) — Fifty-three local government leaders from Canada, the U.S., Sweden, Norway, Finland and Japan opened three days of talks in the northern Japanese city of Sapporo today to discuss environmental problems of the world's northern regions.

Special problems faced in developing resources without despoiling the environment is a main item on the conference agenda.

Bonus for Work

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — An Australian firm which offered employees fur coats, television sets and diamond rings if they came to work every day today reported a cut in absenteeism of only 10 per cent in two months.

The firm which makes car tires and employs about 2,000 persons, reported losing 600 man days a week before the incentive scheme was introduced.

The figure now is just more than 500, a company spokesman said. He said the company will continue the scheme.

Local WCB Branch Opens, First Outside Vancouver

WCB chairman T. G. Ison told an audience of local dignitaries at a brief official opening ceremony the Victoria office was the first one ever established outside Vancouver.

By mid-November, additional offices will be opened at Nanaimo and Courtenay. Other offices will be established across British Columbia in 1975.

The Victoria office will handle work-loss claims for the Duncan area and to a point just north of Chemainus. Areas included in the jurisdiction of the Victoria centre are Port Renfrew, Honeymoon Bay, Thetis Island, Crofton, Shawnigan Lake, Salt Spring Island, Sidney and Sooke.

For the past three months a Victoria room has been operating in the Vancouver office to facilitate the transfer of operations. About 750 claims are expected to be on the books at any one time in the Victoria office and a total of about 10,000 cases will be handled per year. Half of them will be work-loss cases and the other half, administration of medical aid on the job.

About a dozen experienced claims officers have been moved from Vancouver to Victoria and the remaining staff is being hired from this area. Total staff will be 32 employees.

At a brief official opening ceremony, provincial Labor Minister W. S. King said that, whenever possible, governments should decentralize services.

He said British Columbians, being far removed from the federal capital, were not interested in having a centralized bureaucracy of their own forming in B.C.

While it was efficient from an economic point of view to centralize operations, there were offsetting benefits in the form of service to people and benefit to communities in a move towards decentralization, he said.

Workers Compensation Board chairman T. G. Ison said service of the board would be improved because workers and employers in this area now could sit down and talk over their problems with WCB officials face to face instead of trying to communicate by letter.

The Victoria staff would have full power to make decisions.

"We would like anyone communicating with the board on any claims matter affecting a worker living in the Victoria area to send the communication to the Victoria office from now on, not to Vancouver," Ison said.

"This includes claim forms, employers' reports, medical reports, first aid attendants' reports and all communications and enquiries from union officials."

Marina Plan Gets Gov't Go-Ahead

Oak Bay Holdings Meagre

Six wax-sealed envelopes containing personal disclosure documents of Mayor Brian Smith and aldermen today yielded little more than what is already public knowledge of Oak Bay's elected.

Contents were revealed a day later than for most capital region elected officials because of an interpretation of the Municipal Act by Oak Bay clerk E. H. Hart, who cited Section 4 (2) as giving a day of grace where a deadline falls on a day when the municipal offices are closed.

By legislation effective for the first time this year, all elected persons in B.C. were required to file documents for public disclosure by Sept. 15, a Sunday, making Monday the final day in Hart's view.

The clerk, who is official custodian of the disclosure documents in Oak Bay, also made clear he was absent from his office all day Monday and took issue with a Times story which said he "held back the forms."

One alderman requested to be present when her envelope is opened, but she was not available. Ald. Shirley Dowell, a delegate to the Union of B.C. Municipalities conference in Vernon this week, wrote on the cover:

"I request the opportunity to be present on the opening of this envelope in order to answer any questions which may arise."

Smith had the most business and financial information to file, listing one or more shares in Hotchpot Holdings Ltd., no lands, partnership in Pearlman and Lindholm barristers and solicitors and six creditors.

The latter are the Bank of Montreal, Bank of Nova Scotia, Peter Robert Hinton and Margaret Hinton, and Vera P. Courtney and Wallace Courtney.

Ald. John Goult listed his partnership in Burns and Goult barristers and solicitors, one lot in Oak Bay and one creditor, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Ald. Norman Pimlott identified himself as a sales representative in North American Life Assurance Co. and alderman of the Corporation of the District of Oak Bay. He has holdings in All Canadian Holdings "B" shares, and his creditors are Canada Trust Co. and the Bank of Montreal.

Ald. Doug Watts listed only his ownership of the lot adjoining his home at 2285 Woodlawn Crescent.

Oak Bay is one alderman short pending byelection to fill the unexpired term of the late Harry Graham.

The provincial government has no intentions of interceding in development of the controversial Saanichton Bay marina, Resources Minister Bob Williams said today.

Williams said the government would not hold up granting the necessary foreshore lease, "not on the basis of evidence I've seen yet."

He made the comment after receiving a report from B.C. director of lands W. R. Redel on the application by Saanichton Bay Marina Ltd. for a foreshore lease.

Meanwhile, Saanich and The Islands MLA Hugh Curtis said Monday the province should delay its decision "in view of the Tsawout band's hostility" to the project.

"The matter should be looked at very closely and a short delay would be beneficial."

Curtis, who is in Vernon for the annual Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention, said he hopes to meet next week with Central Saanich Mayor Jean Butler, developers Bob Wright and George Wheaton and the Tsawout Indian band which is opposing the proposal on grounds that resulting pollution would destroy marine life in Saanichton Bay.

Following Central Saanich municipal approval of the 1,130-berth marina Saturday, the band has written to Curtis and Don Munro, Esquimalt-Saanich MP, asking for support in their fight.

Gus Underwood, Tsawout band manager, said the Indians will retain a lawyer this week and the band council will meet Thursday night to consider possible legal action. The band has requested that the federal Indian affairs department donate funds for legal fees to fight the marina proposal in court.

Trustees Reject Olive Branch

Greater Victoria school board has rejected a proffered olive branch and stood firm on a long-standing dispute over payment of medical services provided by the now defunct Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

"The more I think about this thing the more I think it's like Ford's pardon of Nixon," board chairman Peter Bunn said Monday at a board meeting.

By accepting the peace settlement the school board might appear to be admitting it was wrong, he said.

The board claimed it was being charged for services in 1971 and 1972 that had never been provided, and refused to pay part of the bill.

Since then the health board has claimed the school board owes it money.

With the old health board now defunct, the municipal treasurers of Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt just want the thing settled and asked the school board to pay a token $24,000 towards the bill and call it quits.

"It's still unjust," said trustee Dr. Philip Ney. "I still think a fee is required for a service and we never did get the service."

The board rejected the municipal offer.

In other business, the board:

—designated Lansdowne junior secondary school as the high school extension of the "more-structured" Sentinel elementary school.

—decided to ask for a meeting with Transport Minister Robert Strachan to argue the board's case for becoming its own insurance agent. This is now illegal, but the board is hoping for legislative amendments.

$100,000 SWITCH

Switching Greater Victoria School District schools to the metric system could cost as much as $100,000, school board trustees were told Monday.

The board agreed to write J. F. D. Mitchell, president of the Canadian School Trustees Association, supporting the proposal of the national body that provincial and federal governments pay the cost of converting to metrics.

Trustee Dr. Philip Ney called the local cost estimate "probably conservative."

NIGHT SCHOOL DISPUTE

Students Urged to Show Up

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

People who have signed up for Camosun College community education courses should turn up for class next week at the assigned school despite a dispute involving school custodians, says a college official.

The custodians, members of Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 382, are refusing to service or open school doors to evening classes or other evening activities.

They claim they are not being adequately paid by Greater Victoria school board for the extra work involved in opening the schools in the evenings.

However, Jim Boyd, co-ordinator of community services for Camosun, says he expects doors of the schools will be opened by supervisory staff.

Two Camosun evening classes started Monday night at Lansdowne junior high school and Victoria high school, and doors were opened by supervisory staff without incident.

About 10,000 people have signed up for the 500 Camosun courses and most are held in local schools.

Greater Victoria School District's custodians "have no intention" of asking Labor Minister Bill King to intervene in their dispute with the school board, a spokesman said today.

Bill Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said he hopes King will refuse to intervene until both sides ask him to.

In CUPE's dispute with interior B.C. school boards, King refused to get involved until both sides requested it, said Cunningham.

Greater Victoria school board decided Monday night to ask King to intervene in the dispute.

"We're concerned that further action by either side could result in a strike or lockout," board spokesman Bill Stavdal said today.

Code Takes Power From Court—Lawyer

Legal interpretation of a single word in the new B.C. Labor Code effectively means the courts no longer have the power to set aside an arbitrator's award where a mistake of law has been made, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers said today.

He was commenting on a B.C. Appeal Court hearing Monday in which the judges ruled that an arbitration board erred by misinterpreting a collective agreement to conclude that the city of Victoria was bound to give the senior of two men promotion, irrespective of ability and other factors.

Although the court ruling rejected the city's appeal against the arbitration decision, the judges said they would have quashed the award had it not been for provisions in the new Labor Code which appear to rule out that right to legal remedy where a mistake of a law is involved.

Specifically, the judgment noted that a decision hinged on the interpretation of the word "misbehave."

Under the old Arbitration Act, de Villiers explained, where an arbitrator made a mistake of law the technical term used was that he had "misconducted" himself, and an appeal court could set aside the award on grounds of misconduct.

But instead of "misconducted," the new Labor Code uses the word "misbehaved." De Villiers said he argued in court Monday that the two terms were synonymous in implying that a technical mistake of law was involved.

But the judges disagreed, ruling that the proper interpretation of "misbehaved" under the code is the ordinarily accepted meaning of the term, i.e. that the arbitrator concerned had shown dishonesty, bias or impropriety in some form.

De Villiers said the net result of the ruling is that legal recourse is now only possible in such cases of flagrant misbehavior, or if an arbitrator exceeded his terms of reference or there was some irregularity in the arbitration procedure itself.

"It seems the courts no longer have the power to correct an injustice caused by an erroneous interpretation of a contract by an arbitrator," he said.

The case, the first of its kind to be heard under the terms of the new Labor Code, involves two long-time city employees engaged in the operation of the Johnson Street Bridge.

When the former chief bridge operator retired in late February last year, city engineer Jim Garnett promoted John Kirkendale, who had been the deputy in the job for 27 years.

But Kirkendale's fellow-operator, F. G. (Bill) Smith, with 22 years bridge service but longer total civic service than Kirkendale, took the matter to arbitration on grounds that his seniority entitled him to the job.

An arbitration board majority ruling last April found in favor of Smith, and in accordance with the award Kirkendale was demoted May 23 — nearly 14 months after he was first promoted to the senior post.

Monday's Appeal Court judgment stated that Garnett had acted properly in promoting Kirkendale rather than Smith, and that the city was bound to take seniority into account only as one of several factors determining eligibility for promotion.

Thus, as de Villiers wryly noted, the city's stand was vindicated although it lost the case.

Q. Can you tell me some good places for fishing onshore around Victoria? This is important to me as I am an invalid and cannot fish from a boat. — J. J. O.

A. A good location is the rocks at Ten Mile Point because you can drive almost right up to them. Another one is that part of the Victoria Golf Club in Oak Bay that looks out over Mouat Reef. The end of the breakwater at Oak Bay Marina is another and, of course, the Ogden Point breakwater, although it's less accessible for the physically handicapped. At this time of the year, if you can travel by car at all, you can get some good fishing off the government wharf at Cowichan Bay.

Mixed Group Sleeping At Priory, Court Told

Alarm Brings 'Silent' Service

There's a subtle security system at the Law Courts but it produces more noise than action.

Under the desk of Mr. Justice H. C. McKay, who is presiding at a B.C. Supreme Court trial involving the Society of the Love of Jesus, there's a button which a judge can push to summon security staff.

But it's a little too handy for the judge, who has accidently touched off the alarm several times so far in the trial. Each time the registrar must rise and leave the court to turn off the alarm.

"My compliments to the security staff," said Mr. Justice McKay with a grin when he sounded the alarm system yet again Monday, "but I've been banging my knees against it (the button) for three years.

"Why don't they move that button over two or three feet?" he asked the registrar.

"What worries me, my lord," said Cecil Branson, defendant's counsel in the case, "is why in three years has security never been sent in?"

Boys and girls slept together in a community room at St. Mary's Priory and an "encounter group" had nude pictures on the walls there, a B.C. Supreme Court trial was told today.

Sister Mary Josephine Donovan, 60, one of five plaintiffs suing for control of The Society of The Love of Jesus, testified that the Priory building at Langford, which in the past had been the exclusive residence of the sisters, was used to house many visiting groups in recent years.

One was a mixed group of visiting American university students and boys and girls bedded down on one occasion in the nuns' community room, alongside the chapel, she said.

She and some of the other sisters complained many times to the Prioress, Mother Leonette Hoesing, she said.

After discovering the mixed group in the community room sometime during 1971, she said she warned one of the girls sleeping there not to let it happen again or she would call the police. It didn't happen again as far as she knows, she added.

Of the encounter group which met in the Priory building, she said:

"They laid around on the floor and ate grapes and what-have-you."

That group had nude pictures all over the community room walls.

"This case sounds stranger and stranger," said Mr. Justice H. C. McKay as he called a morning recess.

"You'd better believe it," said Sister Donovan.

Earlier she had said some of the groups numbered up to 100 and on occasion stayed over weekends at the Priory. Some were Catholic groups.

Of the university contingent from the U.S., she said: "They were all over the place, had plenty of beer and some hard drinks."

Sister Mary Lucy Forde, 74, said the society, which operates an extended care hospital and home for the aged at Langford, "was a wonderful religious community, until 1965."

That was the year Sister Leonette Hoesing was elected mother prioress and an internal dispute between so-called "traditional" and "modern" factions has since led to the suit for control.

But Sister Forde, who is one of the "traditional" faction which includes Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd, conceded in cross-examination that the society is a Roman Catholic religious community, bound by church law, and members must be leading the religious life.

"I'm a Roman Catholic. I never was anything else," she told the court.

Earlier in the day she described what happened when she and two of the other plaintiffs, Sisters Mary Agnes Eaton and Mary Josephine Donovan, were locked from all but a basement kitchen in the priory building March 17, 1973.

She said Mother Julia Hunhoff, prioress of a South Dakota congregation, told her that a new priory building was being opened opposite the priory and that Sister Forde could go there, but not to tell the other two sisters.

"I thought to myself, there's something very strange about that," she told the court.

HOLDINGS NOT MUCH

Victoria city council's three late disclosures of financial holdings — kept under wraps Monday by official adherence to deadlines — were available to anyone interested enough to examine them today.

Under the requirements of the Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act, Ald. Mike Young reports that he has a partnership in the legal firm Straith and Co. and has no land holdings.

His statement says he has one or more shares in 11 companies: International Bancorp Ltd., Value Capital Ltd., Zenmac Metal Mines Ltd., Louisiana Pacific Resources Ltd., Campeau Corporation Ltd., Queenswear (Canada) Ltd., Decision Investments Ltd., Mutual Life equity growth annuity, Universal Savings Equity Ltd., Canada Trust Income Fund and International Energy Fund.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson, a commission salesman for stockbrokers Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co., lists share interests in Sandwell and Co., Majestic Wiley Co. and Q.C. TV, but no land holdings.

And Ald. Alf Hood returns a 100 per cent nil report — no business remuneration, share holdings, creditors nor

'Subtle Threats' Claimed in Certification

Union membership of employees at the Mediaeval Inn was forced upon some of the workers, a spokesman for the employees said Monday.

Ulla Spech disclosed a series of letters from restaurant employees, sent in the wake of certification 16 months ago, which contained subtle threats.

One of the letters said a waitress was in Parksville when contacted by a fellow worker in Victoria asking her to join the union and saying she might be unemployed if she didn't. ". . . I was not home, she had the audacity to ask my roommate to sign the application for me."

Another employee said she was told if she didn't sign with the union for $1 it would cost her $50 later. "I feel this is being forced upon the majority of the staff without a fair vote and should be considered," said the employee.

Other letters were in a similar vein, saying the decision was being forced on them and asking for a representation vote.

Spech said the turnover has been such that of the 23 present employees, only six were there when certification was granted.

However, staff are expected to accept a decision of the B.C. Labor Relations Board which means they will soon be covered by a union contract.

"I have talked to the staff and it seems they now are prepared to accept the decision of the Labor Relations Board," Spech said.

"And I do not think we will appeal the decision. What has bothered us is that we never had a representation election. It was just based on signing cards. I personally don't feel we had a majority vote — maybe on paper but not in reality, not a fair one."

The Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, Local 835, was certified as bargaining agent after signing what the board called "a bare majority" of the employees in April of last year.

Later, with a change in management and staff turnover, the new employees petitioned the board to decertify the union.

The board, in a decision made public Monday, decided to withhold a decision on decertification, saying that "there should be time" to give employees an opportunity to see what union representation is like and "only then can the employees make an informed choice as to whether they wish to continue to be represented by the union."

The board gave the employees, the union and the restaurant six weeks in which to come up with a voluntary agreement. Failing that, it will exercise its power under a section of the Labor Code and write a first agreement.

The Labor Relations Board, in its written decision, said all parties in the dispute misunderstand each other's position.

Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM WELCH

Painful menstruation often appears in young women two to four years after the onset of what has been up till then quite painless periods. It rarely persists after the first pregnancy. It is called "primary dysmenorrhea" to distinguish it from acquired, or secondary, painful menstruation of later life.

Unlike painful periods in later life, primary dysmenorrhea of young women has long been taken lightly by many doctors because they consider it to be emotional in origin, occurring predominantly in the "high strung" and the "neurotic." This attitude is widely held in spite of the fact that primary dysmenorrhea upsets the life of nearly 50 per cent of all young women, a rather large number to be labelled hysterical.

It is, or should be, well-known that the suppression of ovulation with estrogen (female sex hormone) in pill form prevents the occurrence of pain with the following period, a well-established bonus of oral contraceptive pills.

So it seems apparent that though the precise cause of menstrual pain is not clear, what is clear is that its appearance depends on the prior occurrence of ovulation, that cyclic extrusion from the ovary of a single ovum into the Fallopian tube leading to the womb.

Ovulation tends to be irregular, or not to occur at all, until a girl reaches 16 to 18 years of age, which corresponds precisely with the appearance of primary menstrual pain.

And yet textbooks bearing dates as recent as 1972 continue to assert: "The pain of primary dysmenorrhea is always secondary to an emotional problem," or, variously, such pain is ascribed to a "faulty outlook . . . leading to an exaggeration of minor discomfort . . . may even be an excuse to avoid doing something that is disliked."

The dependence of primary dysmenorrhea on ovulation taking place was first demonstrated in 1940, and yet a psychological or emotional cause for such distress continues to be emphasized 30 years later.

Instead of remarking that the severity and duration of the pain of dysmenorrhea could well be expected to make a young woman apprehensive and upset at the prospect of the next period, they seem to suggest that fear and dislike of menstruation cause the actual pain.

A curious reversal of cause and effect that appears to be wholly unjustified, not to mention how distressing it is to a suffering patient to be told that she is in pain because she is neurotic and not up to being a woman.

Could it be that such an attitude is related to the fact that men dominate the study and care of "women's troubles?" Is there an unwitting bias here that corresponds to the charge made by the Women's Liberation groups that we, as men, are biased, whether we know it or not? It seems to me, in the case of primary dysmenorrhea at least, there just may be some truth in that accusation.

SEXUAL PARTNERS

Today it seems to me that the most sensible thing that a loving couple could do would be each to ask the other about their preferences in intimate caresses, and whether there is something that is unpleasant or much disliked by one partner or the other.

Only recently did I find this sort of behavior recommended in one of the many books on sex that are now appearing each week.

Now I find in "The New Sex Therapy," written by an able woman psychiatrist, Helen Singer Kaplan, M.C. (Brunner Mazel, New York City, 10003, 1974) a list of questions that a loving couple might well ask.

I will never forget the millionaire, now dead, who was head of a nationally famous corporation when he came to me as a patient. When I found that all that was wrong with him was that he was depressed and unhappy, I asked him what would make him happy. He replied, "Doctor, I would gladly give a hundred thousand dollars to charity if my 'professional beauty' wife would ever show her affection by putting her arm lovingly around my shoulders."

Dr. Spock Discusses Sex Education:

Facts Alone Are Not Enough

By DR. BENJAMIN SPOCK

(Ninth of 10 parts)

Fifty years ago, after Freud had shown the connection between various neuroses and the frightening, guilty ideas that some children acquire about sex in early childhood, many of the professionals who wrote and lectured for parents had high hopes that such neuroses could be prevented. They felt that if parents could be helped to understand the need for wholesome and thorough sex education, it should be possible not only to prevent children from developing sexual neuroses but also to improve greatly the sexual adjustments of men and women.

The psychological disturbances that these sex educators had in mind were, for instance, the obsessive and compulsive neuroses, the phobias, the hysterical paralyses and anesthesias, frigidity in women and impotence in men, homosexuality and other perversions, and lesser sexual incompatibilities of many kinds.

Better and more wholesome sex education could be achieved, these educators believed, if parents would talk with greater frankness and naturalness about the sexual facts of life with their children, beginning at an early age.

Time and experience have shown that those hopes of half a century ago were too high and ingenuous. To be sure, we do have a more comfortable attitude toward sex nowadays and there may have been some reduction in certain of the neuroses most directly related to excessive anxiety about sexuality. But there is still a great deal of neurosis, perversion, impotence and frigidity, as well as maladjustment to sex and to marriage.

The principal way in which the early educators misjudged was in assuming that the neuroses and sexual disturbances to which Freud referred were caused mainly by simple, intellectual misunderstandings about sex by children who had not had things explained to them correctly. Actually the more significant causes of these neuroses lie deeper in the unconscious mind — in disturbed feelings, particularly those of children toward their parents.

A typical example would be an abnormally close and possessive relationship between a child and the parent of the opposite sex and an exaggeratedly antagonistic, fearful, guilty attitude toward the other parent. Lopsided relationships like these become interwoven with children's early sexual feelings. When they grow up, their mixed-up feelings may repeatedly get them involved in out-of-kilter, unhappy relationships with other people or produce neurotic symptoms, or both.

Another way in which the early sex educators misjudged was in assuming that once children got the facts straight, they would be on the right track for good. Anyone who has had young children who ask questions and state their own views about the facts of life knows that no matter how carefully they are straightened out each time, they are forever developing new, unrealistic notions. A parent's first thought is that another child is feeding them misinformation. Occasionally, that's the explanation. But more often it's that the children themselves are dreaming up new facts of life — having fantasies of their own on the basis of their own particular feelings about parents, other people, and themselves.

Perhaps you think I'm defeating my puprose by playing down the effectiveness of sex education right at the start of this discussion. But I want not only to give you a realistic view, but also to put you more at ease. I want to prevent your getting the idea that in order to keep your children mentally or sexually healthy, you must give them a perfect course of sex instruction — or at least give them perfect answers to their questions. You'll do a better job if you don't take it too seriously. I also want to be able to point out what, by contrast, is really the important part of sex education.

I feel quite sure that the most crucial aspect of sex education for any child is not the factual explanations they hear from time to time, but the picture they form of the over-all relationship between their parents and between each of their parents and themselves. If their parents love each other, respect each other, show an appropriate degree of physical affection for each other, then the children will have a basic image laid down that will be a powerful guide for them as they grow. They will strive always to be like the parent of their own sex. They will hope to have, to cherish and to help a future spouse of their own as they see their parent doing.

In addition, it is necessary for each of a child's parents to enjoy the child as boy or girl — whichever the child is. A boy, in order to be ready to play a man's role as husband and worker, should have felt his father's general approval, affection and firm leadership. A father who has been consistently standoffish makes an unsatisfactory guide. The same applies between the mother and daughter.

The parent of the opposite sex should be able to enjoy the child as a member of the opposite sex. (I don't mean that the parent should be seductive to the child.) This, plus the child's own romantic attachment to the parent of the opposite sex, prepares him or her to fall in love with, to win, to be a good lover to, to take care of, to live comfortably with, an appropriate member of the opposite sex — someday.

Whether or not children hear the most approved explanation of the physical difference between the sexes or of where babies come from or of how human beings mate is of secondary importance. To stretch this point, even if children get most of their information from ignorant playmates or from literature that parents disapprove of, nevertheless, if their feelings are right, they will not be harmed much by this misinformation.

Am I saying there is no importance at all to sex education of the specific, verbal type through childhood? No. I think it is definitely worthwhile. It helps, if only in a secondary way, to give children — gradually, as they grow — a more correct and wholesome view of things.

Discussion about the facts of life is also valuable in giving children the feeling that it is all right from time to time to ask their parents more questions — until children think they know more than their parents. This will keep children from having as strange fantasies, or being as puzzled by other children's morbid ideas, as they might otherwise.

To have occasional casual talks with their parents also keeps children from imagining that their parents are sternly disapproving of any sexual interest — a feeling that children are likely to have in the absence of any mutual discussion.

'La Difference' Is Undeniable

Much has been written about the tendency to program children in early life into accepting the prescribed roles considered to be suitable for their sex.

While I totally agree that girls should not be automatically assigned a passive role, nor boys encouraged to pursue exclusively "manly" activities, certain innate behavioral differences between the sexes do exist:

While girls will lie silently on their beds for three hours completely engrossed in the Green Fairy Book, little boys are given to lying under their beds with a tiny dump truck in each hand, smashing them together and bellowing "whoom, whoom, whoom."

When presented with a life-size full color photograph of a baby chipmunk peering out of a French horn, a little girl will grab the picture in both hands and kiss it. A boy will chew it up and swallow it.

A little girl will run sobbing to her room, barricade the door with a toy box, and refuse to come out for seven hours at the words "I told you not to get dirty!" A boy will examine his shirt and calmly retort "that's not dirt. That's tar."

While a little girl will take a pink receiving blanket and drape it over her head to see how she would look with long pink hair, a little boy will tie the blanket across his shoulders, yell "Up, up and away" and jump off the garage roof.

A girl's treasure box usually contains six shiny rocks, four seashells, half of a locket, and a tube of glittery silver eye shadow that she found in the restroom at the zoo. A little boy's treasure box contains the scab from his elbow and a dead worm.

Go Slow With 'Dad'

DEAR ABBY: A reader offered $100 to the charity of your choice, and you picked the Cancer Crusade. Abby, I think you made a poor choice. Curing cancer and other diseases of old age will create far worse problems for our society than it will solve.

Do you realize that if we find cures for cancer, strokes, heart diseases and kidney diseases, we will double the number of years between age 65 and death (at 96) for the average person? Coupled with reduced birth rates, this means we will more than double the proportion of old people in our society, and we will astronomically increase the numbers of the very old. And while we go on looking for medical miracles to extend life, we condemn the increasing numbers of old people to a life of poverty and neglect.

I think it is wrong for society to try to offer people a longer life when we cannot assure them of a better life. That is why I favor a moratorium on life-extending medical research until the year 2000.

In times past, people looked to the old for wisdom and guidance. I think we need their guidance now. I would like to see the opinions of old people, and even of terminal cancer patients. I would ask them, "What is more important to you, a longer life or a better life?" And, more generally, "What should society do to make longer life better?" — John Lozier, Ass't Professor, Anthropology, W. Va. University, Morgantown.

DEAR PROF: Your proposed "moratorium on life-extending medical research" as an aid to population control is, to say the least, unique.

Personally, I would rather deal with the "problems" that result from reduced suffering and longer life, than return to the "good old days" when only the strong and lucky survived. And if this conflicts with the message of anthropology, I would be surprised.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are getting on in years and would like to make out our wills leaving everything we have to each other.

I don't want to go to a lawyer and go through all that "party-of-the-first-part, party-of-the-second-part" red tape. I just want to write a couple of sentences saying my wife and I want to leave all our worldly goods to each other.

Will that be okay? — Short and Snappy.

DEAR S AND S: Wills are a touchy business. Their validity is subject to many unforeseen conditions, including a wide variety of state laws. Let a lawyer translate your intentions into a binding document. You'll be glad you did.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this letter just to say a few words to "No Complaints." (She said big noses and flat bosoms are "in.")

I don't know what magazines you read, honey, but in all the ones I see, the models do wear bras. Furthermore, if big noses and flat busts are "in," it sure beats me why most guys would sooner take out a good-looking, big-bosomed girl than a big-nosed, flat-chested one (assuming they are both intelligent and have good personalities).

I'm not putting anyone down, just voicing my opinion. If "No Complaints" is happy, then good for her. But for those other flat-chested girls who aren't, a little padding never hurt anybody. — Pretty Good-Looking.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Weds., Sept. 18

By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on taxes, insurance, inventories, savings, financial statements — specially as they affect mate or partner. Be thorough. Tear down, if necessary, in order to rebuild. Reinforce structures. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons could be in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low. Do more listening than asserting. A contract or special agreement comes into focus. If single, there is talk of marriage. Married or single, you will be finding out who means the most to you and what to do about it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message. Be aware of basic necessities. One who advocates otherwise is willing to be careless — at your expense. Home adjustment is in picture. Domestic matters dominate. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid self-deception. Means you now are more prone than usual to wishful thinking. You want to see the best in others, especially family members. But now there are some around you with ulterior motives. Know it and prepare accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): Basics, responsibility, money, reward, prestige and promotion all are emphasized. Capricorn, Cancer individuals could play key roles. Get price of property verified through appraisal. Double-check. Be frank. Read and be aware of bills, costs, promises and projected profits and expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis is on how you communicate with relative who hangs on to lost cause. Be receptive but don't settle for being a crying towel. Help those willing to aid themselves. One with drinking problem may only seek to relate sob stories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Highlight collections, payments, the gathering together of needed material. Take new view. Don't feel that only the past matters. You have brighter future than might currently be apparent. Take intuitive leap, cold plunge into future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Cycle is high and your judgment is on target. Your intuitive intellect "works overtime." You see beyond what is apparent on surface. You teach and learn. You are able to win friends and influence influential people. Aquarian is likely to play a role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find that what occurs behind closed doors takes on added importance. You are called on to lead a "cheering section." Means some who are ill or confined want you to impart spirit of optimism. You will know what to do and when to do it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on how you relate to one who respects you, regards you highly and is influenced by you. Steer clear from path of exploitation. If love is not in your heart, let it be known. Don't carry on a "love charade."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis is on responsibility, career and ambition. You make changes which help ingratiate you with professional superior. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. Your questions will be received — and answered.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are capable now of looking past the forest and seeing the trees. You perceive individual traits. You become fascinated with customs, language, foreign countries. Get together with loved one and make travel plans!

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are aggressive, artistic, particular, humane and you can also be stubborn. Forces have been scattered but in October your feet are on ground. You will regain sense of direction. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. You understand fiery people and you seem to be surrounded by those who have trigger tempers.

To be well informed about the many aspects of food buying will ensure that you get the best value for your money.

Redeem coupons only if you have use for the product.

Avoid waste. Reserve a spot is the front part of your refrigerator for leftovers and plan the next day's meals around them.

At the check-out counter, have year meat and perishable goods packed in the same bag as the frozen foods to keep them cool.

The folder stresses that when buying meat, compare the different cuts on the basis of cost per serving rather than cost per pound. The price of meat is no indication of its food value. A cheap cut is just as nourishing as a more expensive one.

You will also find suggestions for nutritious meat alternates. These include mixed bean-cheese salad, peanuts in chop suey, peanut butter sandwich and milk and creamed eggs with vegetables.

The folder also features a few tasty dishes which are very kind to your budget. "Sauteed Kidney in Mustard Sauce", served on hot rice or toast, is very good. Also mouthwatering and economical is "Liver with Vegetables", served on hot noodles or with potatoes.

LABOR OF LOVE for Barbara Ryan, known in Vancouver as Barbara the Butler, is preparing meals for private parties. She recently won $1,100 in the professional category of the British Columbia menu competition, with three firsts, three seconds and a third.

Meet Barbara . . . the Butler

family

An experience Barbara Ryan would rather forget is the second party she catered, about two years ago. The 18 guests arrived two hours late and "it was obvious they had been somewhere drinking."

They insisted on a cocktail hour, however, so when they finally began eating, "they were so drunk, some of them had their heads in their plates."

"I had made a really beautiful meal," said Mrs. Ryan.

"I was just beginning and I had made some really super things.

"Then this happened. I may as well have given them dog food."

Mrs. Ryan said her daughter told her not to get so involved, just to worry about getting paid.

"But that's not really how I feel. I want to feed people, not just make money."

Since then, Barbara the Butler has cooked and served hundreds of successful gourmet meals for people who want to entertain in their own homes but want someone else to do the work.

She recently won $1,100 in the professional category of the British Columbia menu competition, collecting three firsts, three seconds and a third.

When she goes to someone else's home to fix dinner, she visits there first.

"I check out the kitchen and discuss the menu and make out a time plan and a shopping list.

"For example, if a client wants a casserole for 10 people I need to know if her casserole is big enough. If not, I take my own."

Mrs. Ryan also caters to picnics and outdoor parties. An example is a couple who went for a long weekend to a cottage at Point No Point, on the southwest coast of Vancouver Island.

"I made things like French pate, a seafood gruyere with wine sauce, split pea soup and trapper's bread, cabbage rolls, frosted grapes and a chocolate cake with peppermint icing.

"And I put in all kinds of things I'd like if I were on a picnic — like candied walnuts."

For big parties, Mrs. Ryan works with her daughter Colleen and if she has a really big party — a dinner for 60 — she has friends who help.

She fondly recalls a cocktail party for 150 she prepared for former federal cabinet minister Judy LaMarsh when she lived in Vancouver.

"Judy was great to cook for because she really knows food," said Mrs. Ryan.

"She showed me her cookbooks, which were floor to ceiling in one whole room. I thought 'Oh, boy, Judy, if you could see my little tattered things on the backs of envelopes, like my beef stew recipe which is almost obliterated with stew . . .'

"I had made a guacamole dip. Judy liked it so much, she is one of the few people I have ever given a recipe to."

Mrs. Ryan's ambition is to open a restaurant. She has a site in mind and architects are working on plans.

'Good Old Roughhouse' Livened Sunday School

. . . relives memory

"We were a bunch of little hellions," is the way city archivist Ainslie Helmcken — now a grandfather — remembers the days when he was a Sunday School pupil in Reformed Episcopal Church.

Boys and girls gathered then in a small wooden building on a site now occupied by the parish hall.

According to Helmcken there were times during a Sunday morning when teachers might be called together for consultation.

That was the signal " for a good old roughhouse, ending in most instances with the boys climbing out the windows and heading for the meadows and woods that crowded close to the little building."

Helmcken chuckles when he goes on to tell you his Aunt Dolly taught his class. "She would come back, look around, count up the number missing and throw up her hands in despair."

That is only one of many memories the city archivist has of days when he attended Reformed Episcopal Church as a lad.

At a time when older members in the congregation could talk personally of the founding service of the church, held in a little Presbyterian hall on Pandora Avenue in November, 1874.

Centenary of that gathing is to be marked on Sunday, November 3, with a special service.

Edith Louisa Helmcken (the Aunt Dolly of the city archivist's memories) was a daughter of Dr. J. S. Helmcken — one of the founders. And when she was a small child she attended Sunday School in that same little wooden building.

In her nephew's possession today is a letter she wrote, as a small girl, to her brother James (later to be Victoria's beloved "Dr. Jim" and Ainslie Helmcken's father), when he was studying in the British Isles.

The letter, dated October 6, 1875, makes it clear the little wooden building was finished and ready for Sunday School classes before the church was completed. When members must still have been going to the Pandora Street location for services.

In part, the childish wording, spelling and writing records: "We had Sunday School in our new Sunday School it is much nicer than having it in the church."

"Our new church will soon be finished. I will be very glad as it will be so near. Their is going to be another bazaar one for our church and one for St. Joseph's Hospital. Papa laid the foundation stone (of the hospital) he got a very pretty silver trowel . . ."

Ainslie Helmcken reminds you that in its first years, the Reformed Episcopal Church (also known as The Church of Our Lord) was backed by Kanaka Row on Humboldt Street.

"Where Sandwich Islands who came in with the sailing ships had little houses on stilts." That is where the north wing of the Empress Hotel stands today.

He tells you, too, of the bachelor cabins that stood for years on Humboldt, just west of the church. "They housed some amazing characters."

Kitty-corner to the church was the White Horse Hotel. "Closed on Sundays but where a man could slip in the back door for a pint if he wished."

He speaks with nostalgia of the five or six elm saplings donated by one of the Pemberton family, and planted around the church on both the Blanshard and Humboldt Street sides.

They grew to be mighty trees and framed the pioneer edifice in a lattice-work of greenery. Until a December storm in 1970 brought one of the huge branches down on a corner of the church, perilously near an historic rose window.

A tree doctor then found the trees dangerously rotted. His advice was to cut them down, and that is exactly what happened.

Today the church itself — now in its 98th year — is in need of renovations.

California redwood, popular and easy to obtain in those early days, was used in the over-all structure — even for the roof.

Despite good care, the wood has deteriorated and special work is needed now to preserve it.

That, with extensive repairs to the eaves and the mouldings will necessitate an outlay of at least $40,000.

"We'll get it," Ainslie Helmcken predicts. "Church members are working hard on ways and means right now.

"Into the bargain there are many men and women in Victoria who got their first religious instruction in that historic building and a good percentage of them are proud enough of that fact to give toward preserving it today."

Attractive Wife Boosts Image Of Husband

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The better-looking his wife is, the higher a man rates in other people's eyes, two psychologists have found.

Leonard Saxe and Daniel Bar-Tal, researchers at the University of Pittsburgh, showed portraits of various couples to 128 men and women and asked them to try to rate personalities, success and social and economic backgrounds of the individuals in each picture.

The portraits were paired differently for some of the observers than for others, although in every case the observers were told that they were looking at a man and wife. Some showed homely men paired with attractive women, while the combination was switched around for others.

The findings:

"Among females," Saxe said, "an unattractive woman married to an attractive man is evaluated lowest on these scales, whereas an attractive male is evaluated highest."

Why is this?

"Maybe it's because people figure if an unattractive man can get a good-looking wife, he must have something else going for him."

Handsome men, meanwhile, were rated low on both trustworthiness and brains.

Your Poinsettia Needs Its Unbroken Slumber

Myths have grown up around the care of poinsettia plants in the home if you want them to develop their colorful bracts each winter by keeping the plants.

These fanciful stories make it difficult to present plain facts of culture because the general public is reluctant to believe culture is relatively simple.

Beginning at this time in September, the potted poinsettia should have just been brought into the house after spending the summer outdoors.

The transition from outdoors is less abrupt now, for although nights can be cool (36 degs. F. at grass level) the doors and windows of the home still wide open and artificial heat is not drying the air. A plant which has spent the summer growing well outdoors needs a lot of air during the first weeks indoors.

Your plant should be a healthy specimen with dark green leaves, whether it is a first year cutting or a second or third year cut-back old plant.

Keep the poinsettia now in a sunny airy window where it will not wilt from heat during the day. Do not overwater, but water well by immersing the pot in a basin of water perhaps once a week. This is a good way to be sure the rootball is completely dampened.

No more water is needed until the topsoil has become dry and the pot becomes comparatively light in weight again. But do not allow the leaves to wilt.

Towards the end of this month, poinsettia needs a long unbroken period of darkness to help the formation of the little greenish flower buds and subsequently assist the coloring of the bracts, or upper leaves of the plant.

The simplest way to provide long hours of darkness is to put the plant into a room, sunroom or even a cupboard if necessary, from the time you switch on lights (just now, about seven p.m.) until sunrise the next morning.

Then it goes back to a sunny window for the daylight hours. Continue this treatment until buds form, and bracts begin coloring well.

This system is needed because the poinsettia grows naturally outdoors (as a tree) in a country where winter daylight is around nine hours duration. When we expose the plants to 15 hours of light with our artificial lighting of homes in winter, the plants refuse to set buds and thereby delay the coloring of bracts.

The dark place chosen for this nightly retreat must have unbroken darkness, that is, no turning on of light even for a moment, nor must there be a street light outside the window to shine in, not even car lights sweeping past. Darkness must be continuous and complete. Hang a Do Not Disturb sign on the door handle.

There is no myth about this. The commercial greenhouseman (sorry, — person) uses black cloth covers on frames around poinsettias to provide these hours of darkness. Even pinholes in the cloth spoil the effect for plants near the pinholes.

The same scheme has been used for years to bring chrysanthemums into bloom during months of long daylight hours.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In the blue-ribbon Life Masters Pairs Championship held this past July in New York City, 516 of our continent's top-ranking pairs were entered. The tallest pair by far were Harry Stappenback of Uniondale, New Jersey, who is 6 feet 11 inches, and Bill Root of Boca Rattan, Florida, who is 6 feet 9½ inches.

Back in 1967, Root represented the United States in the World Championships. Although he rarely plays these days, his handling of a delicate part score contract in today's deal illustrates that his "stature" has not diminished. He was sitting in the South seat. Stappenback was North. North-South vulnerable. South deals.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♠	3 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♥.

West's two-spade overcall was an artificial expert bid, showing five hearts and five cards in an unspecified minor suit (either clubs or diamonds).

In retrospect, East should have overtaken West's king of hearts with the ace, and returned a heart to West's queen. He would then have ruffed a third heart lead, and, in time, he would have made two more trump tricks. But he allowed West's king of hearts to win the first trick. A second heart lead was taken by East's ace.

To trick three, East led a club. South's ace winning. The ace of trumps was cashed next, felling West's queen, and this was followed by the queen, king and ace of diamonds. South's remaining heart was discarded on the third diamond lead. He then ruffed a diamond.

Root now cashed his king of clubs, after which he ruffed the ten of clubs with dummy's next-to-last trump. At this point, with ten tricks having been played, the lead was in dummy.

Dummy's last three cards were the jack of hearts, the jack of trumps, and the diamond seven. East had the K-10-8 of trumps. And declarer had the 9-7-6 of trumps. No matter what was led from dummy, Root could not be prevented from making his nine of trumps for his ninth trick. His score on the deal was an excellent one.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"We've got it," said John. "I closed the deal today."

Betty smiled. "The one with the funny shape? Well, now you'll have to decide what to build on it."

"No problem," John told her. "And the shape's okay, a regular right-angled triangle with perimeter of 374 feet. As a matter of interest, the area is just 15 times that number of square feet."

What were the dimensions?

Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: Ann 185 stamps, Joe 259.

Fourth Sub

CHERBOURG, France (UPI) — France today launched the 6,000-ton Indomitable, its fourth nuclear submarine.

It will be equipped with the M20 nuclear missile, the first French sub to carry such a weapon.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BARKLEY — Douglas Bruce, In loving memory of Doug, taken from us suddenly September 17, 1972.

HALSTROM — In loving memory of a dear brother and son, Dennis Halstrom, who passed away September 17, 1972.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed, mom and dad, Lila, Grace and families.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HEWETT — In loving memory of a dearly beloved mother, who passed away Sept. 16, 1973.
—Very much missed by her daughter-in-law Bernadette, Mrs. F. M. Hewett.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

Julie Tops Evonne To Win Cup

CLEVELAND (AP) — The United States won its first Bonne Bell Cup tennis challenge Sunday behind playing captain Julie Heldman's 6-3, 6-1 victory over Australia's Evonne Goolagong.

The straight-set victory brings the gleaming silver bell home to U.S. shores for the first time since the best-of-nine series between American and Australian women was inaugurated here two years ago.

The U.S. swept all four matches Saturday, after losing the singles openers Friday to jump ahead 4-2 going into Sunday's play.

The Aussies won the challenge rounds 5-2 here in 1972 and 6-3 last December in Sydney.

Miss Heldman's win was the final U.S. victory Sunday.

Australia's Leslie Hunt downed Janet Newberry 6-3, 6-2 and Miss Goolagong combined with Janet Young to outlast Peggy Michel and Kris

YOUTH GRANT JOBS SUBSTANTIAL, VARIED

Slightly more than one-quarter of the $459,710 spent by Opportunities for Youth on the Vancouver Island last summer went to projects in Victoria.

A total of 77 groups are listed in an accounting of the program financed by federal grants released this week. Planning of next year's program is under way.

Two of the more costly projects were in Victoria, $12,310 providing 10 jobs re-educating native youth in the ways and knowledge of their elders, and $11,790 for 14 jobs to provide community programs and facilities in Victoria West.

A third substantial program based in Victoria was to provide summer theatre for the island at a cost of $11,080 for eight jobs.

Design and construction of therapeutic, education and recreational aids for handicapped children made jobs for six at a cost of $10,365; a directory of educational resources within an hour's drive of Victoria made work for seven at a cost of $9,225; information on nutrition to drug addicts and former users cost $8,382 and made work for five.

Five persons were employed for $8,100 in setting up a recreatinal program for Fernwood district youth; a display of historical, cultural and architectural collections was funded for $8,575 and created seven jobs; stimulating public awareness of learning disabilities and supportive resources was a seven-man project costing $6,488.

A recycling depot cost $6,440 and kept seven persons busy; a research study of Blenkinsop Valley made work for six and cost $2,940; entertaining students while teaching theatre arts was a $2,360 project involving three persons; a program taking live entertainment to shut-ins and hospital patients cost $3,405 and funded five people.

Stimulating day care children through murals was a four-man job costing $2,990; creative drama workshops for pre-schoolers and delinquent children cost $4,890 for four persons; a community centre project in Fairfield district employed five at a cost of $6,525.

A four-man research of Victoria and Vancouver media cost $6,336, and a physical education-recreation program for children of Blanshard Court cost $5,975, engaging six persons.

In Saanich, encouraging public interest in heritage sites cost $6,679 and employed six; at Brentwood, a childrens' park and gardens for the elderly involved 12 and cost $11,120; 15 were employed in an archaeological dig on the Pauquachin Reserve at Sidney, where a playground-sports field was prepared at a cost of $12,197.

At Shawnigan Lake an activity centre was operated by six persons for $5,340; Saturna Island Community Club facilities were increased by four persons at a cost of $5,580.

At Nitinat Lake seven jobs were created for $5,100 to provide recreation for children and services to the elderly; at Mill Bay the Indian reserve was cleaned up and beautified for $4,554, employing six; at Jordan River five persons gave instruction on water safety and surfing in Pacific Rim Natrional Park for $7,350.

Two Ganges projects employed 17 persons, the first costing $9,523 to provide a recreational-educational experience for Salt Spring Island children, the other $6,000 to entertain prison inmates in the province.

Five persons cleared brush and made a park for $2,373 at Crofton, and at Duncan 24 persons were employed on three jobs costing a total $18,690; repairs to Somenos longhouse, $6,940; arts workshops, display and newsletter, $5,490; recreation program for mentally handicapped children, $6,260.

'Gov't Still Profits' Despite Fairer Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Canadians are paying more income tax than they should because a scheme introduced by the federal government at the beginning of the year to make the system fairer is not working perfectly.

The newspaper notes in an Ottawa story that the scheme — the indexing of personal income tax to the rise in the cost of living — was promoted by the government as a measure removing "government as a profiteer of inflation."

The indexing system was designed to stop inflation from eroding real income gains by adjusting the tax brackets and the exemption allowances according to the inflation rate.

But despite indexing, the federal and provincial governments are still benefiting from inflationary wage and salary gains — although not nearly as much as they would under the old system, the newspaper says.

It says the adjustment of the tax system is made once a year, on Jan. 1, and working Canadians should have noticed last January that a smaller amount of income tax was being deducted from their paycheques.

Because the tax system was adjusted by last year's inflation rate of 6.6 per cent, when taxpayers pay their 1974 taxes a married taxpayer with two dependents under 16 would receive a $61 cut if his income is $5,000; $65 if income is $6,000; $74 if income is $8,000; $89 if income is $10,000; $131 if income is $15,000, and $487 if income is $50,000.

However, because inflation has been running at more than 10 per cent this year income has been taxed at a higher rate than it should, the Globe and Mail says, adding that there should be bigger tax cuts.

NDP Pledges Tax Break

EDMONTON (CP) — Each family of six in Alberta would be provided with a provincial income tax exemption to a maximum of $10,000 under a New Democratic Party government, provincial NDP leader Grant Notley said today.

Notley told a news conference this was one way in which an NDP government would use the huge windfall revenue from oil being amassed by the province.

He said a sliding scale of deductions would be provided smaller families, couples and single persons with the program estimated to cost $100 million.

Notley said the revenue, expected to reach $900 million, was discussed at the party's provincial council meeting at Stettler during the weekend.

He said the party will urge the Conservative government to commission a provincial tax reform study which would adopt the ability-to-pay principle as its basic premise.

Notley said his "mini-budget" also suggested removal, at an estimated $50 million cost, of all health care premiums.

Other proposals include a universal dental care plan at an estimated cost of $50 million, a pension increase for all Albertans receiving the federal guaranteed income supplement, costing about $45 million, and a $15 million program to eliminate tuition fees at all post-secondary institutions.

$800,000 Suit Launched

EDMONTON (CP) — An agency of the Alberta government has initiated legal proceedings to recover more than $800,000 from Bohdan Robert Orysiuk, former executive director of the Alberta Housing Corp. (AHC).

The AHC, a Crown corporation, filed a statement of claim in Alberta Supreme Court Monday.

The statement of claim accuses Orysiuk, a key witness in a judicial inquiry investigating actions of former AHC personnel, of entering into a secret agreement with Edmonton lawyer Edward P. Achtem to split commissions paid to the lawyer and acting negligently, incompetently and in breach of his duty in engaging the lawyer at "an exorbitant rate of commission." It also alleges that Orysiuk acted in the same manner in paying more than could have reasonably been expected for land and causing the corporation to borrow $2.2 million on improvident and onerous terms from "foreign lenders."

The statement of claim also alleges that Orysiuk received by way of secret commission, reward or kickback the sum of $30,000 in connection with the loan.

Taken in total the suit seeks damages of $803,906.42.

The statement of claim also seeks "exemplary damages" as the "court sees fit" and calls for an order directing Orysiuk to "account for all other unauthorized profits and benefits" he received.

The six-page statement was handed to Orysiuk as he completed a day of testimony before the inquiry headed by Mr. Justice J. M. Cairns of Alberta Supreme Court.

Soviet Weather Gadget Sets Off Bomb Scare

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It came out of the sky, and at first, residents thought it was some kind of a bomb.

The city rolled out the bomb squad and sealed the area to safeguard people from a possible explosion.

The bomb squad discovered that "it," which was still operating when it landed on the ground between two homes Sunday, was some sort of weather device.

It was described as consisting of two canisters made of styrofoam with batteries, a barometer and a test light indicating it was still working despite the impact of the landing.

It also had Russian writing on it.

Police said the gadget apparently floated down from a six-foot nylon parachute. Bits of a "balloon" were still attached to the device.

Police said because of the Russian writing, they would contact the Soviet embassy to determine if the object is a Russian weather instrument that had somehow got lost.

Deficit Narrows

PARIS (AP) — France's seasonally-adjusted trade deficit narrowed to $442 million in August from a deficit of $627 million in July, the foreign trade secretariat announced. In August, 1973, France recorded a trade surplus of $58 million, based on present exchange rates.

ON THEIR WAY to the largest international amphibious military exercise ever carried out in Canada, men of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry embark aboard HMCS Provider. The first landings are due to take place early Wednesday off the northern end of Vancouver Island. A total of 2,280 men will take part. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Klansman Trial Set

CALGARY (CP) — The Imperial Wizard of the Alberta branch of the Ku Klux Klan was released from custody today pending trial on a charge of criminal negligence causing the death of a Mexican immigrant.

Tearlach (Charlie) Dunsford-Mac a' Phearsoin, 25, of Calgary, was ordered released on his own recognizance at a provincial court hearing after the crown did not oppose it.

He was arrested last Friday after Elias Acuilar Ramirez, 23, was found shot to death in a northwest Calgary home.

Steel Mill Opened

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed pushed a button Monday to send 75 tons of molten steel spewing forth as he officially opened Steel Co. of Canada's $26 million expansion in east Edmonton.

Premier Lougheed praised what he called Stelco's record as a "good corporate citizen of Alberta" but reiterated his stand that the government will use its power "to be a catalyst where necessary."

Words Blamed in Woman's Death

EDMONTON (CP) — The court reserved judgment Monday in an appeal against a conviction for non-capital murder after the defence lawyer argued that the victim's statements were sufficient provocation for the shooting.

James Edward Clark, 52, said that just before he shot the woman he had been living with for 5 years "she told me what she did was her own business."

"I don't think any man took the guff I did from any woman," Clark said in a statement read in court. "This running around with other guys. Every time my back was turned, she was going to the beer parlor."

Clark was charged last May after he telephoned police to tell them he had just shot a woman. He was sentenced to life imprisonment.

S. Bruce Smith, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Alberta, said the Supreme Court of Canada found there was provocation enough for a normal man to lose self-control when he was told by a woman that she would rather be with a Chinaman than with him.

In that case, the verdict was manslaughter.

Shinerama Proceeds Fall by Half

University of Victoria Shinerama proceeds for Cystic Fibrosis research totalled $6,500 this year, falling far short of last year's $12,000.

Student council president Kirk Patterson said Monday that 350 students participated in the annual shoe-shine blitz Saturday, compared to almost 700 who took part last year.

It was hoped between $10,000 and $12,000 could have been collected for research into the disease, he said.

Gas Price Future Still Open

Premier Barrett said today British Columbia is still open to negotiation on its position to double the export price of natural gas.

The gas price increase from 61 cents per thousand cubic feet to $1.35 need not come in one jump, he said, and B.C. will be discussing the increase with Washington State "in the next few weeks."

The B.C. Energy Commission filed a brief last week with the National Energy Board which requested an increase in the export price of gas, and said the competitive price of gas in the U.S. was $1.35.

Barrett also said a recent announcement that B.C. would not share its natural gas shortage with U.S. customers would not necessarily involve breaking the export contract with the U.S.

According to the contract, said the premier, B.C. had agreed to export "up to 800 million cubic feet of gas per day" and thus if the province exports as much gas as it can up to the 800 million it will be fulfilling its contract terms."

Olympic Attitude 'Scandal'

The provincial government's attitude in failing to support the 1980 Winter Olympic Games' bid by the Vancouver-Garibaldi area is "scandalous," the president of the Canadian Olympic Association said Monday.

Harold Wright of Vancouver, the COA president, made the comment in a Victoria ceremony to mark the Western Canada launching of the second series in the 1976 Olympic Coin Program. (See also story on Page 8.)

Profits from the sales of seven coin series is expected to raise about $250 million, which will be used to help finance the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

The first series of coins is expected to net $35 million.

"One such series," said Wright, "would be enough to sell Garibaldi."

He feels Vancouver "has most of the facilities required" and the development of skiing, toboggan and luge runs on Whistler Mountain in Garibaldi Park is the major requirement.

"Canadians have been guests of other countries for 26 Olympic Games since 1896," he said. "I think its shocking that we are telling those nations, by one government's attitude, that we are not interested in having them come to Canada.

"It's the greatest way I can think of selling Canada," Wright added.

He also pointed out that the coin sales, as set up, allows people of other countries to help finance the games.

Nine million coins are sold in each series. Only 40 per cent, or about 3.6 million, of the coins are allocated for the Canadian market.

The U.S. gets 25 per cent of coins, 18 per cent goes to Europe and the remaining 17 per cent to the Pacific Region.

"We have six years before the 1980 Winter Games," said Wright. "That gives us a lot of time to prepare another successful coin series."

Recipes & Food Tips

Just like Granny used to make. A great treat for any kind of day and a cake everyone will rave about.

Praline Applesauce Cake With Broiled Icing.

2¾ cups sifted cake flour
1 1/3 cups granulated sugar
1½ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. ground cloves
1½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. salt
½ cup shortening
1¾ cups applesauce (14 oz. can)
2 eggs
1½ cups raisins

Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease 13"x9"x2" pan with butter and dust with flour. Sift flour and other dry ingredients (sugar, baking soda, baking powder, ground cloves, cinnamon, and salt) into a bowl. Add shortening and applesauce. Beat 2 minutes with mixer a medium speed. Add eggs and beat 2 minutes longer or until well blended. Fold in raisins. Pour into prepared pan. Bake 35 min. or until cake is done. Cool 15 min. on cake rack. Do NOT remove from pan.

Spread following topping on cake. Broil 6 inches from heat 3 to 4 minutes until bubbly and golden.

Topping
½ cup butter
¾ cup brown sugar
¼ cup cream
1½ cups chopped walnuts or pecans
2/3 cup coconut

Top Official Shuffled, Pay Cut

A top-level provincial civil service official has been moved to a lower-paying position as part of an internal rearrangement of the provincial lands department.

As part of a shuffle announced Monday by Resources Minister Bob Williams, David Borthwick will take a pay cut of $3,000, to $25,000 a year, as a special adviser to the lands branch.

His replacement as deputy associate minister is Norman Pearson, who will receive $33,000 a year, up from the $22,740 he received as Williams' staff consultant.

Wayne Richards, former publisher of a Kitsilano community newspaper, will take over as staff consultant at $21,516 a year and Stewart Headley, a PNE director and long-time NDP member, will become Williams' administrative assistant at $17,628 a year.

Borthwick said he could not comment on his new position, other than to say he will be doing special work.

The suffle, he said, is "just part of the re-strucfuring in the department."

In 1970, John de Wolf, then leader of the provincial Conservative party, charged that Borthwick had a conflict of interest because he was a member of a mining promotion syndicate, which included top officials of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources, involved in the controversy over development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver.

De Wolf said Borthwick signed an agreement on behalf of the government leasing land in the Cypress Bowl area to Alpine, with one of his mining associates signing for the company.

Williams said today the Cypress Bowl controversy "wasn't a factor" in the decision to shift Borthwick.

"We're simply reorganizing the lands branch and the man that is the new associate deputy has a background in the area that's needed in terms of the new direction the department is taking," said Williams.

Asked why Borthwick has received a salary cut, Williams said his new position is a "less demanding job."

Pearson, 36, is a community and regional planner and has worked for the government for two years. He is past president of the Planning Institute of B.C. and former editor of the Town Planning Institute of Canada Newsletter.

Along with the new appointments, Williams announced several "new directions" for the lands service.

He said the service will place greater emphasis on working with other departments in sorting out "conflicting demands and future uses on Crown lands."

New methods of co-ordinating government land purchases will be investigated and a stepped-up program on the use of greenbelt lands, ecological reserves and appropriate Crown lands for recreation, education and research.

The "out-moded and time consuming Crown land leasing process" will be shifted to a new program, said Williams, and there will be greater realization of the development potential of Crown lands.

By late this morning the legislative clerk's office had still not received financial disclosure forms from Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey).

Officials who do not comply with the new disclosures act are subject to summary conviction with a maximum $10,000 fine but Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today he did not want to comment on any action that might be taken against officials who did not meet with Monday's disclosure deadline.

"I would hope that any recording clerk would inform anybody in default and there's probably a reason for these delays," he said.

A spokesman for the clerk's office said McGeer had telephoned this morning to say he had mailed his disclosure Thursday evening in Vancouver.

A disclosure return from NDP MLA Hartley Dent (Skeena), missing earlier, turned up in the mail this morning. Dent's form was marked "nil" holdings to disclose on all five sheets.

Official deadline for filing disclosures was Sept. 15 but officers were accepting disclosures all day Monday the 16th.

Bus, Truck Set Alight In Port Hardy Strike

DOG KILLS RABBITS

Graham Lake arrived home from work Monday to find the mangled bodies of 14 rabbits he had been raising for food strewn around his backyard.

They had been killed by a marauding dog.

His wife said today, had their two young children been in the yard at the time, they too might have been attacked by the dog.

At 8 a.m. a neighbor and her young son reported seeing a large German shepherd dog leaving the driveway of the Lakes' home at 2963 Cedar Hill, one of the rabbits still in his mouth.

"We were in the house at the time," she said. "It was a large black and gold dog. He must have been in a real frenzy.

"Had the children seen him going for the rabbits they would have rushed out to save them and who knows what would have happened them?"

She said two of the rabbits killed were does, one expecting a litter some time next week.

"The others were all ready for the freezer," she said.

Mrs. Lake said she and her husband had been raising rabbits for 10 years, building the cages in the same manner as those that were broken into Monday.

Lake told the Times, "When a dog in the city can get so vicious it's a threat to the city. I'm afraid to let my kids go out in the yard."

Both he and his wife said it was high time the city bylaw on straying dogs was enforced.

She said she had little hope that the dog's owners can be

An old truck and bus blocking entrance to the Utah International copper mine at Port Hardy were burned by arsonists Monday night as the six-week-old strike escalated into violence.

The burning culminated a day of violence on the picket line in which one man was cut in a fight involving three pickets and member of the mine supervisory staff who crossed the line.

The company blockaded the road with the bus and truck when rumors spread that strikers might enter the mine property and try to halt all work.

Pickets blocked both main roads into the mine with about 100 cars today but they were outside company property.

Trouble came to a head Monday when a member of the mine supervisory staff, Dick Robertson, successfully crossed a picket line one mile outside the mine and then was involved in a taunting match with picketers.

Witnesses said a fight broke out and picketer Dan Ludwigson received a three-inch cut.

"There was a lot of punching and kicking," the witness said. "There was blood all over the road."

Ludwigson was treated in hospital and released.

At 2:30 p.m. a cavalcade of 70 cars of workers came to the picket line and blockaded the road, preventing supervisory personnel from leaving by the shorter main road into Port Hardy. They left by a back road.

The employees said they were trying to force the company to resume negotiations. The blockade was removed at 8 p.m. when the company said it would listen to any suggestions from a mediator appointed by the provincial government as to how negotiations could be resumed. The mediator was talking to both sides today but talks had not resumed by noon.

Meanwhile, the company, reacting to rumors that pickets might enter the company property to disrupt work, moved an old bus up against a flatbed two-ton truck to block entrance to the mine.

At 9:15 p.m. a person or persons unknown set fire to the bus and truck, completely gutting the interior of both vehicles, RCMP spokesmen said.

"The fires were deliberately set and we are investigating further," the RCMP office said.

No charges had been laid by noon today.

There was no work at the mine today because both the mine front road and the longer rear road were blocked by workers' cars, the RCMP said.

Dollar value of the bus and truck was said to be negligible as both vehicles were very old. The 40-seat bus was used to transport employees around the mine but was not used frequently.

The bus-truck blockade was set up 200 yards outside the main entrance to the mine. The picket line was another 1,200 yards down the road.

The strike began Aug. 6 when 35 members of local 115-C of Office and Techinical Employees walked out seeking a first contract with the mine.

$1,000 BIKER REWARD

The father of missing Duncan motorcyclist Lothar Doliwa has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the location of his 23-year-old son.

Lothar was last heard from early July 28 when he apparently drove to his parents' home and then suddenly left.

Copper Price Drops

By AL FORREST
(Times Staff)

The price of copper has fallen sharply to about 60 cents a pound, considered to be the break-even level for many British Columbia mines, the Mining Association of B.C. said today.

Copper was selling at 84 cents a pound July 11 and was as high as $1.40 a pound within the last 12 months. It was quoted in the range of 59-61 today.

"This does not mean that a lot of mines will suddenly be closing but it does mean trouble on the horizon if the price goes lower and stays there for an extended period of time," said P. R. Matthew, secretary-manager of the association.

He said B.C. mines generally made good profits during the past 12 months but tough times have returned and there is no prospect of a turnaround for at least a year.

Supply of copper is increasing faster than the demand because of recessions in Europe, North America and Japan and the price likely will be depressed for at least 12 months, he said.

Conditions vary at each mine but the most recent estimate is that a large number of B.C. operations require a price of at least 60 cents a pound to keep up with inflation, pay increased labor costs and for depreciation of plants.

Copper accounts for half of B.C.'s mineral production being worth $500 million in 1973.

Matthew said regardless of the fact mines may be losing money for the rest of the year, they will have to continue to pay a 2.5 per cent provincial production royalty until Dec. 31 and then begin paying a 5 per cent royalty in 1975.

The province also collects a 50 per cent royalty on windfall profits and in practice this means when the price of copper rises above 85 cents a pound. It has been below that level since July 11.

Provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick has suggested he might alter the mine tax formula to encourage new mines to go into production but there would be no relief for existing mines.

Alteration of the formula could take the form of a system whereby the 50 per cent royalty applied on copper priced considerably above 85 cents a pound.

U.S. Senate to Probe Perjury, CIA Chile Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee decided unanimously today to investigate secret disruptive activities by the Central Intelligence Agency in Chile.

Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho), announced the committee decision, saying the study would help determine what course of action to take toward officials who may have perjured themselves in 1973 when they testified that the U.S. had not intervened in chile against Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The decision came after a Senate staff report recommended that a perjury investigation be initiated against former Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms and accused Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of having "deceived" the Senate foreign relations committee in sworn testimony.

The confidential report, which centres on testimony given by high-ranking officials on U.S. covert intervention in Chile's internal political affairs, also recommends perjury and contempt investigations of three other government witnesses in the Chile inquiry: former assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs Charles E. Meyer, former U.S. ambassador to Chile Edward Korry and William Broe, former chief of the CIA's Latin American division.

The report, submitted to subcommittee chairman Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho,) and Clifford P. Case, (Rep-N.J.), also asks that the record of Kissinger's confir-

Junior Highs Inadequate—Parents

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A majority of parents think junior high schools aren't doing an adequate job, a study of Greater Victoria high schools states.

The study, done by Dr. Christopher Hodgkinson of the University of Victoria, shows 52 per cent of parents surveyed found junior high schools inadequate.

Forty-four per cent of teachers also found junior highs performing inadequately, while 59 per cent of students and 64 per cent of school administrators thought they were doing a good job.

"Parents are the most dissatisfied of the four groups studied," says Hodgkinson's report.

"Aggrieved parents see the schools as a sort of 'Greater Funland' where all is permitted and permissive.

"There are too many field trips; not enough hard work; not enough homework; teachers are afraid to be strict; there is not enough structure; discipline is poor . . .

"A sizeable proportion of parents are manifestly opposed to what they perceive as modern trends.

"Whether in reaction or from nostalgia they would like to see a revision of the work ethic of yesteryear. At least for their children."

Teachers' main criticism of junior high schools was levelled at elementary schools that supply students to the junior highs, said the report.

"It was felt that . . . students were overprotected and overpromoted. They arrived immature and unable to cope with responsibility and choice until they reached the level of Grade 10.

"The skills of literacy and numeracy were neglected. In short, the buck was passed to the junior secondary school."

Ninety per cent of administrators, 72 per cent of parents and 64 per cent of teachers viewed discipline as a major problem. Most students, 64 per cent, did not.

A sizeable proportion of all four groups thought Grade 10 students should be part of the senior high school, not the junior high.

"Some girls would like Grade 10 moved up since this would improve dating prospects," said the report.

The study found many students were very happy with the school system as it stands, and even appreciative of it.

"Most of them in fact liked things the way they are, they liked the variety of offerings in the curriculum, the teachers, the science courses, the industrial education courses, the general school climate."

ROBERT BONNER IN HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER — Robert Bonner, former B.C. attorney-general was in satisfactory condition in Vancouver General Hospital Monday after undergoing surgery for an undisclosed ailment.

"His condition is fairly serious," his wife said. "How serious is something they are going to find out. He . . . will be in at least a week."

A hospital spokesman said surgery "went fine" and listed Bonner's condition as satisfactory but would give no further information.

No announcement has been made as to whether Bonner will be well enough to pursue his plans to chair a Social Credit Party resolutions seminar at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 26-27.

NO MILLIONS FOR TRUSTEES

No millionaires were uncovered by financial disclosure statements filed this week by Sooke and Saanich school board trustees.

In Saanich school board, chairman Rubymay Parrott disclosed she had shares in five companies, Blue Star Mines, Eaton Viking Fund Ltd., Port Dundas Grain, Tomatin Malt and Miltonduff-Glenlivit Malt.

She owns a lot on Ardmore next to the family home, where the domestic water supply well is situated. She has no income from companies and no creditors.

Jack Armstrong works as a salesman for Midland Doherty Ltd. of 754 Fort. Doherty is one of his creditors, along with Bank of Commerce, Mutual Life Insurance Co. and London Life Insurance Co.

He owns a lot on Doumac.

Armstrong has shares in Pamour Porcupine Mines Ltd., Consolidated Fortune Channel Ltd., East Malartic Mines Ltd., Carolin Mines Ltd., Peerless Rug Ltd., Hart Mines Ltd., Dickinson Mines Ltd., Camflo Mines Ltd., Canada North West Land Ltd., Agnico Eagle Mines Ltd., Little Long Lac Mines Ltd., Van Silver Mines Ltd., Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd., Wharf Resources Ltd., and North Air Mines Ltd.

Walter Tangye has stocks in Alwin Mining Co. Ltd., Cuvier Mines Ltd., International Mogul Ltd., Nordev Resources Ltd., Rand Resources, Ltd., Riley Data Share International Ltd., United Accumulative Ltd., B.C. Teachers' Federation Co-Operative, and Royal Trust "M" Fund.

He listed no creditors, land holdings or income from companies.

Lois Walsh and Ann Foerster listed no stocks, income from companies, land or creditors.

In Sooke school board, chairman Alan Littler listed ownership of three lots, one on Fashoda Place and two on Happy Valley Rd.

He lists no stocks, creditors or income from a company.

No Surprises From Directors

In the briefest statement of all, View Royal director Patricia Massy wrote N-A (non-applicable) to all sections — companies in which she holds more than one share; business that is financially remunerating for services performed as employee, officer, owner or part-owner; creditors; and land holdings.

The statements were filed by six of the seven CRD directors outside municipal boundaries. The seventh, Ron Dumont of Sooke, has not filed his disclosure.

Reached at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention in Vernon today, Dumont said regional district executive director Dennis Young has his disclosure. Young also is in Vernon.

Dumont added that his disclosure says nothing. "It's all nil," he said.

Board chairman Jim Campbell disclosed he holds more than one share in Rampart Mines, a small Vancouver-based company holding an option on gold-silver-base metal prospect at Lytton, according to a report on mines.

He declared his Saturna Island farm, of which he is owner-operator, as a financially-remunerating business. His only creditor is the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and his land holding was given as a fractional quarter on Saturna.

Colwood director Dick Emery, an electrical contractor, listed his business — E. H. Emery Electric Limited, 740 Princess Avenue, of which he is manager, and Princess Holdings Limited, of which he is director. The holding company rents the premises to the electric company.

His land holding was restricted to 740 Princess Avenue and companies in which he holds one or more shares were his contracting company and the holding company. He has no creditors.

Salt Spring Island director George Heinekey declared he has 500 shares of Consolidated Beaumont and 10 shares of Bank of B.C.

His business interests include a federal licence for a magazine for sale of explosives in the Gulf Islands and sale of eggs from Claremont Poultry, on a commission basis to stores on Salt Spring. He has no creditors or land holdings.

Langford director Earl Pallister had one creditor, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, and land holdings of four sections on Millstream Road.

Metchosin director Ken Rainey wrote Nil to all sections of the disclosure except land holdings, where he listed two lots in Metchosin.

Phillips Files Lengthy Disc losure

Among MLAs whose financial disclosures had not been received by the clerk of the legislature by noon Monday, backbencher Socred Don Phillips (South Peace River) filed the most lengthy disclosure.

Phillips has a 60 per cent share of Aspol Motors Ltd. and also holds shares in Capricorn Enterprises Ltd.

He is a director of both those companies and receives remuneration from them as well as receiving remuneration from H.S.P. Enterprises as a partner and Webb's Mens Wear Ltd. as a director.

Aspol, the only company in which Phillips listed a major interest, operates the Ford franchise dealership in Dawson Creek and has one wholly-owned but inactive subsidiary — Aspol Motors U-Drive.

Aspol owns three lots of land and has two major creditors — Ford Motor Company Credit Ltd., and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Phillips also listed five separate land holdings of his own in Dawson Creek and Chetwyn and five creditors, including the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Lake View Credit Union, Royal Bank of Canada and Trader's Finance Ltd.

Columbia River Social Credit MLA Jim Chabot listed himself as a director of Rola Holdings Ltd. and disclosed share holdings in 10 firms: Albany Gas and Oil Ltd., Bank of B.C., Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil, Coseka Resources Ltd., Kaiser Resources Ltd., Northern and Central Gas Corp., VanDer Hout Assoc., Fruit Growers Mutual Insurance Co., Investors Growth Fund and United Venture Fund.

Chabot listed one land holding in Invermere.

Pat Jordan, Socred MLA for North Okanagan, disclosed she is a director of Renata Holdings Ltd. and listed five companies in which she holds shares.

Those holdings are: Balco, 100 shares, House of Stein, 300 shares; Great Pacific Industries, 100 shares; Athabasca Columbia Resources Ltd., 400 shares; and Giant Mascot Mines, 100 shares.

Jordan listed four properties in which she holds an interest and two creditors — the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) disclosed holdings in Great West Life Assurance Company, which paid him as an underwriter; Sikanni Investments Ltd.; Pinnacle Petroleum Ltd.; and Iron Bay Trust Ltd.

On the NDP side of the house, Vancouver-Burrard MLA Rosemary Brown filed the longest list of holdings, with shares in six firms.

Those holdings include: Daymore Ltd., B.C. Sugar, Electrohome, Bank of Nova Scotia, Woodward Stores and Thermo-Images.

Brown also listed land holdings on Lasqueti and Ruxton Islands.

Dewdney NDP MLA Peter Rolston listed share holdings in five companies: Brameda Resources, Brunswick Mining, Rayor Mines, Pacific U.S. Fund, and W. H. Carson Ltd.

Other backbenchers filed the following disclosures:

Alex Fraser (SC—Cariboo) listed holdings in three companies: John Fraser and Co. Ltd., F. and W. Truck and Equipment Ltd. and F. and W. Truck and Equipment Rentals Ltd.

Bob McClelland (SC—Langley) listed shares in Potter Distilleries Ltd. and one creditor — Toronto Dominion Bank.

Frank Richter (SC—Boundary-Similkameen) listed holdings in Fruit Growers' Mutual Insurance Company and one land holding in the Similkameen area.

Roy Cummings (NDP—Vancouver-Little Mountain) listed a 50 per cent share in a Dairy Queen outlet and one property in Coquitlam.

Harold Stevens (NDP—Richmond) disclosed an interest in Steves Holdings (the family farm), Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association, Surrey Co-operative Association, Richmond Savings Credit Union and West Coast Savings Credit Union.

Doug Kelly (NDP—Omineca) listed one land holding in the Coast district; one creditor — Frank and Wilhelmine Keesling in Hollywood, Calif., and one company paying him for services — Doug Kelly Logging.

Don Lewis (NDP—Shuswap) disclosed shares in Mainline Co-operative and Noca Dairies, property comprising his farm and three farm creditors — Farm Credit Corporation, Industrial Development Bank and B.C. department of agriculture (for land clearing).

Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) listed major shares in Tabor Enterprises Ltd., a company he said has been inactive since its inception. He also disclosed two land holdings, one in Metchosin and one in New Westminster.

Chris D'Arcy (NDP—Rossland-Trail) disclosed share holdings in Canadian Cellulose and Eatons and creditors, Castlegar Savings Credit Union and the Bank of Montreal.

Daisy Webster (NDP—Vancouver South) listed holdings in Canada Savings Bonds, B.C. Teachers Credit Union and Royal Bank savings account.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) listed three creditors— Bank of Montreal, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the federal income tax department.

NORTHERN RESOURCES DISCUSSED

TOKYO (AP) — Fifty-three local government leaders from Canada, the U.S., Sweden, Norway, Finland and Japan opened three days of talks in the northern Japanese city of Sapporo today to discuss environmental problems of the world's northern regions.

Special problems faced in developing resources without despoiling the environment is a main item on the conference agenda.

Bonus for Work

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — An Australian firm which offered employees fur coats, television sets and diamond rings if they came to work every day today reported a cut in absenteeism of only 10 per cent in two months.

The firm which makes car tires and employs about 2,000 persons, reported losing 600 man days a week before the incentive scheme was introduced.

The figure now is just more than 500, a company spokesman said. He said the company will continue the scheme.

Local WCB Branch Opens, First Outside Vancouver

The provincial workers compensation board Monday launched a decentralization program by opening a Victoria branch at 1581 Hillside.

WCB chairman T. G. Ison told an audience of local dignitaries at a brief official opening ceremony the Victoria office was the first one ever established outside Vancouver.

By mid-November, additional offices will be opened at Nanaimo and Courtenay. Other offices will be established across British Columbia in 1975.

The Victoria office will handle work-loss claims for the Duncan area and to a point just north of Chemainus. Areas included in the jurisdiction of the Victoria centre are Port Renfrew, Honeymoon Bay, Thetis Island, Crofton, Shawnigan Lake, Salt Spring Island, Sidney and Sooke.

For the past three months a Victoria room has been operating in the Vancouver office to facilitate the transfer of operations. About 750 claims are expected to be on the books at any one time in the Victoria office and a total of about 10,000 cases will be handled per year. Half of them will be work-loss cases and the other half, administration of medical aid on the job.

About a dozen experienced claims officers have been moved from Vancouver to Victoria and the remaining staff is being hired from this area. Total staff will be 32 employees.

At a brief official opening ceremony, provincial Labor Minister W. S. King said that, whenever possible, governments should decentralize services.

He said British Columbians, being far removed from the federal capital, were not interested in having a centralized bureaucracy of their own forming in B.C.

While it was efficient from an economic point of view to centralize operations, there were offsetting benefits in the form of service to people and benefit to communities in a move towards decentralization, he said.

Workers Compensation Board chairman T. G. Ison said service of the board would be improved because workers and employers in this area now could sit down and talk over their problems with WCB officials face to face instead of trying to communicate by letter.

The Victoria staff would have full power to make decisions.

"We would like anyone communicating with the board on any claims matter affecting a worker living in the Victoria area to send the communication to the Victoria office from now on, not to Vancouver," Ison said.

"This includes claim forms, employers' reports, medical reports, first aid attendants' reports and all communications and enquiries from union officials."

Lost Gold Turns Up Next Door

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Monday 670 ounces of gold reported missing from a safety deposit box in a downtown Vancouver bank was discovered in another deposit box in a bank next door.

Martin Anderson, 42, of Seattle, told police he discovered Sept. 6 that someone had forged his name to the safety deposit box and walked off with his gold.

Anderson told police he had paid $120 an ounce in June, 1973, for the gold. At current prices of about $157 an ounce, its value would be $100,000.

Police said Monday the gold is being held and the case is still being investigated. Charges could be laid.

Search Off For Missing Swimmer

RCMP have officially cancelled a full-scale search for David Lindsay, last seen on the beach of Hernando Island the afternoon of Sept. 1, less than an hour before he was to be picked up by two brothers who were skin diving on nearby Twin Island.

The RCMP marine division, a helicopter, tracking dog, ground searchers and a special party organized by the man's father failed to turn up a trace of him other than some clothing he apparently left on the beach.

George Smith Jr., son of the caretaker on privately-owned Hernando Island, said he spoke to Lindsay about 3:15 p.m., having met him walking on the beach. Lindsay was to have been picked up by his brothers at 4 p.m. when they returned to Savary Island where the group was camped. Lindsay failed to show at the rendezvous.

Police said Lindsay agreed to meet the speedboat on a point of Hernando where he had been left to hike while the others drove. It appeared he tried to swim more than a mile to Savary and became a victim of strong currents.

College Strike Off for Talks

VANCOUVER — Classes were back to normal at Vancouver Community College Monday night after Labor Minister Bill King appointed Dr. Noel Hall of the University of B.C. to look into an eight-month contract dispute between the college council and vocational instructors.

Karl Gregg, president of the Vocational Instructors Association, whose members have been picketing Vancouver Vocational Institute, Vancouver School of Art, the college's Langara campus and its special programs division since Tuesday, said Monday the strike was over for the time being.

Pickets were lifted when King agreed to appoint an industrial inquiry commission to settle the dispute.

The labor minister said the college council and the Vocational Instructors Association (VIA) would decide whether it wanted the commission's settlement report to be binding.

Derriksan was charged with spearing salmon near Penticton, about 20 miles south of here. He was convicted and fined $1.

WILSON CAMPAIGNING, REJECTS COALITION

Times News Services

LONDON — Prime Minister Harold Wilson Monday night launched his bid for re-election by insisting that his Labor party ruling alone can pull Britain out of its economic crisis.

Firmly rejecting proposal for a national government embracing other parties, Wilson declared: "There will be no question of a coalition. Your do not get determined government if there is trimming and deals going on all the time."

The 58-year-old premier thus sharply separated himself from his chief rivals. Both the Conservatives, led by Edward Heath, and the Liberal party of Jeremy Thorpe have appealed to the growing sentiment for a unity government here by leaving the door open to alliances with those outside their own ranks.

Wilson has not yet set the election date, but political informants said he would be making an announcement Wednesday or Thursday, scheduling the vote for Oct. 10.

The election would mark the second time in seven months Britain's voters have been called to the polls to pick a new parliament.

In the Feb. 28 election, Britons failed to give any party an overall majority in parliament, forcing Wilson to run the country with a shaky minority government.

"We now ask for the return of a Labor government, with a working majority, so we can continue to tackle the great problems facing Britain," said a Labor party manifesto released at Wilson's news conference.

Summing up its frankly socialist program, the manifesto said, "Our objective is to bring about a fundamental and irreversible shift in the balance of wealth and power in favor of working people and their families."

Marina Plan Gets Gov't Go-Ahead

The provincial government has no intentions in interceding in development of the controversial Saanichton Bay marina, Resources Minister Bob Williams said today.

Williams said the government would not hold up granting the necessary foreshore lease, "not on the basis of evidence I've seen yet."

He made the comment after receiving a report from B.C. director of lands W. R. Redel on the application by Saanichton Bay Marina Ltd. for a foreshore lease.

Meanwhile, Saanich and The Islands MLA Hugh Curtis said Monday the province should delay its decision "in view of the Tsawout band's hostility" to the project.

"The matter should be looked at very closely and a short delay would be beneficial."

Curtis, who is in Vernon for the annual Union of B.C. Municipalities' convention, said he hopes to meet next week with Central Saanich, Mayor Jean Butler, developers Bob Wright and George Wheaton and the Tsawout Indian band which is opposing the proposal on grounds that resulting pollution would destroy marine life in Saanichton Bay.

Following Central Saanich municipal approval of the 1,130-berth marina Saturday, the band has written to Curtis and Don Munro, Esquimalt-Saanich MP, asking for support in their fight.

Gus Underwood, Tsawout band manager, said the Indians will retain a lawyer this week and the band council will meet Thursday night to consider possible legal action. The band has requested that the federal Indian affairs department donate funds for legal fees to fight the marina proposal in court.

Oak Bay Holdings Meagre

Six wax-sealed envelopes containing personal-disclosure documents of Mayor Brian Smith and aldermen today yielded little more than what is already public knowledge of Oak Bay's elected.

Contents were revealed a day later than for most capital region elected officials because of an interpretation of the Municipal Act by Oak Bay clerk E. H. Hart, who cited Section 4 (2) as giving a day of grace where a deadline falls on a day when the municipal offices are closed.

By legislation effective for the first time this year, all elected persons in B.C. were required to file documents for public disclosure by Sept. 15, a Sunday, making Monday the final day in Hart's view.

The clerk, who is official custodian of the disclosure documents in Oak Bay, also made clear he was absent from his office all day Monday and took issue with a Times story which said he "held back the forms."

One alderman requested to be present when her envelope is opened, but she was not available. Ald. Shirley Dowell, a delegate to the Union of B.C. Municipalities conference in Vernon this week, wrote on the cover:

"I request the opportunity to be present on the opening of this envelope in order to answer any questions which may arise."

The envelope was left intact until her return from Vernon.

Smith had the most business and financial information to file, listing one or more shares in Hotchpot Holdings Ltd., no lands, partnership in Pearlman and Lindholm barristers and solicitors and six creditors.

The latter are the Bank of Montreal, Bank of Nova Scotia, Peter Robert Hinton and Margaret Hinton, and Vera P. Courtney and Wallace Courtney.

Ald. John Goult listed his partnership in Burns and Goult barristers and solicitors, one lot in Oak Bay and one creditor, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Ald. Norman Pimlott identified himself as a sales representative in North American Life Assurance Co. and alderman of the Corporation of the District of Oak Bay. He has holdings in All Canadian Holdings "B" shares, and his creditors are Canada Trust Co. and the Bank of Montreal.

Ald. Doug Watts listed only his ownership of the lot adjoining his home at 2285 Woodlawn Crescent.

Trustees Reject Olive Branch

Greater Victoria school board has rejected a proffered olive branch and stood firm on a long-standing dispute over payment of medical services provided by the now defunct Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

"The more I think about this thing the more I think it's like Ford's pardon of Nixon," board chairman Peter Bunn said Monday at a board meeting.

By accepting the peace settlement the school board might appear to be admitting it was wrong, he said.

The board claimed it was being charged for services in 1971 and 1972 that had never been provided, and refused to pay part of the bill.

Since then the health board has claimed the school board owes it money.

With the old health board now defunct, the municipal treasurers of Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt just want the thing settled and asked the school board to pay a token $24,000 towards the bill and call it quits.

"It's still unjust," said trustee Dr. Philip Ney. "I still think a fee is required for a service and we never did get the service."

The board rejected the municipal offer.

In other business, the board:

—designated Lansdowne junior secondary school as the high school extension of the "more-structured" Sentinel elementary school.

—decided to ask for a meeting with Transport Minister Robert Strachan to argue the board's case for becoming its own insurance agent. This is now illegal, but the board is hoping for legislative amendments.

$100,000 SWITCH

Switching Greater Victoria School District schools to the metric system could cost as much as $100,000, school board trustees were told Monday.

The board agreed to write J. F. D. Mitchell, president of the Canadian School Trustees Association, supporting the proposal of the national body that provincial and federal governments pay the cost of converting to metrics.

Trustee Dr. Philip Ney called the local cost estimate "probably conservative."

NIGHT SCHOOL DISPUTE

Students Urged to Show Up

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

People who have signed up for Camosun College community education courses should turn up for class next week at the assigned school despite a dispute involving school custodians, says a college official.

The custodians, members of Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 382, are refusing to service or open school doors to evening classes or other evening activities.

They claim they are not being adequately paid by Greater Victoria school board for the extra work involved in opening the schools in the evenings.

However, Jim Boyd, co-ordinator of community services for Camosun, says he expects doors of the schools will be opened by supervisory staff.

Two Camosun evening classes started Monday night at Lansdowne junior high school and Victoria high school, and doors were opened by supervisory staff without incident.

About 10,000 people have signed up for the 500 Camosun courses and most are held in local schools.

Greater Victoria School District's custodians "have no intention" of asking Labor Minister Bill King to intervene in their dispute with the school board, a spokesman said today.

Bill Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said he hopes King will refuse to intervene until both sides ask him to.

In CUPE's dispute with interior B.C. school boards, King refused to get involved until both sides requested it, said Cunningham.

Greater Victoria school board decided Monday night to ask King to intervene in the dispute.

"We're concerned that further action by either side could result in a strike or lockout," board spokesman Bill Stavdal said today.

Code Takes Power From Court—Lawyer

Legal interpretation of a single word in the new B.C. Labor Code effectively means the courts no longer have the power to set aside an arbitrator's award where a mistake of law has been made, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers said today.

He was commenting on a B.C. Appeal Court hearing Monday in which the judges ruled that an arbitration board erred by misinterpreting a collective agreement to conclude that the city of Victoria was bound to give the senior of two men promotion, irrespective of ability and other factors.

Although the court ruling rejected the city's appeal against the arbitration decision, the judges said they would have quashed the award had it not been for provisions in the new Labor Code which appear to rule out that right to legal remedy where a mistake of a law is involved.

Specifically, the judgment noted that a decision hinged on the interpretation of the word "misbehave."

Under the old Arbitration Act, de Villiers explained, where an arbitrator made a mistake of law the technical term used was that he had "misconducted" himself, and an appeal court could set aside the award on grounds of misconduct.

But instead of "misconducted," the new Labor Code uses the word "misbehaved." De Villiers said he argued in court Monday that the two terms were synonymous in implying that a technical mistake of law was involved.

But the judges disagreed, ruling that the proper interpretation of "misbehaved" under the code is the ordinarily accepted meaning of the term, i.e. that the arbitrator concerned had shown dishonesty, bias or impropriety in some form.

De Villiers said the net result of the ruling is that legal resourse is now only possible in such cases of flagrant misbehavior, or if an arbitrator exceeded his terms of reference or there was some irregularity in the arbitration procedure itself.

"It seems the courts no longer have the power to correct an injustice caused by an erroneous interpretation of a contract by an arbitrator," he said.

The case, the first of its kind to be heard under the terms of the new Labor Code, involves two long-time city employees engaged in the operation of the Johnson Street Bridge.

When the former chief bridge operator retired in late February last year, city engineer Jim Garnett promoted John Kirkendale, who had been the duty in the job for 27 years.

But Kirkendale's fellow-operator, F. G. (Bill) Smith, with 22 years bridge service but longer total civic service than Kirkendale, took the matter to arbitration on grounds that his seniority entitled him to the job.

An arbitration board majority ruling last April found in favor of Smith, and in accordance with the award Kirkendale was demoted May 23 — nearly 14 months after he was first promoted to the senior post.

Monday's Appeal Court judgment stated that Garnett had acted properly in promoting Kirkendale rather than Smith, and that the city was bound to take seniority into account only as one of several factors determining eligibility for promotion.

Mixed Group Sleeping At Priory, Court Told

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Boys and girls slept together in a community room at St. Mary's Priory and an "encounter group" had nude pictures on the walls there, a B.C. Supreme Court trial was told today.

Sister Mary Josephine Donovan, 60, one of five plaintiffs suing for control of The Society of The Love of Jesus, testified that the Priory building at Langford, which in the past had been the exelusive residence of the sisters, was used to house many visiting groups in recent years.

One was a mixed group of visiting American university students and boys and girls bedded down on one occasion in the nuns' community room, alongside the chapel, she said.

After discovering the mixed group in the community room sometime during 1971, she said she warned one of the girls sleeping there not to let it happen again or she would call the police. It didn't happen again as far as she knows, she added.

Of the encounter group which met in the Priory building, she said:

"They laid around on the floor and ate grapes and what-have-you."

That group had nude pictures all over the community room walls.

"This case sounds stranger and stranger," said Mr. Justice H. C. McKay as he called a morning recess.

"You'd better believe it," said Sister Donovan.

Earlier she had said some of the groups numbered up to 100 and on occasion stayed over weekends at the Priory. Some were Catholic groups.

Sister Mary Lucy Forde, 74, said the society, which operates an extended care hospital and home for the aged at Langford, "was a wonderful religious community, until 1965."

That was the year Sister Leonette Hoesing was elected mother prioress and an internal dispute between so-called "traditional" and "modern" factions has since led to the suit for control.

But Sister Forde, who is one of the "traditional" faction which includes Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd, conceded in cross-examination that the society is a Roman Catholic religious community, bound by church law, and members must be leading the religious life.

"I'm a Roman Catholic. I never was anything else," she told the court.

Earlier in the day she described what happened when she and two of the other plaintiffs, Sisters Mary Agnes Eaton and Mary Josephine Donovan, were locked from all but a basement kitchen in the priory building March 17, 1973.

She said Mother Julia Hunhoff, prioress of a South Dakota congregation, told her that a new priory building was being opened opposite the priory and that Sister Forde could go there, but not to tell the other two sisters.

"I thought to myself, there's something very strange about that," she told the court.

Alarm Brings 'Silent' Service

Under the desk of Mr. Justice H. C. McKay, who is presiding at a B.C. Supreme Court trial involving the Society of the Love of Jesus, there's a button which a judge can push to summon security staff.

But it's a little too handy for the judge, who has accidently touched off the alarm several times so far in the trial. Each time the registrar must rise and leave the court to turn off the alarm.

"My compliments to the security staff," said Mr. Justice McKay with a grin when he sounded the alarm system yet again Monday, "but I've been banging my knees against it (the button) for three years.

"Why don't they move that button over two or three feet?" he asked the registrar.

"What worries me, my lord," said Cecil Branson, defendant's counsel in the case, "is why in three years has security never been sent in?"

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me some good places for fishing onshore around Victoria? This is important to me as I am an invalid and cannot fish from a boat. — J. J. O.

A. A good location is the rocks at Ten Mile Point because you can drive almost right up to them. Another one is that part of the Victoria Golf Club in Oak Bay that looks out over Mouat Reef. The end of the breakwater at Oak Bay Marina is another and, of course, the Ogden Point breakwater, although it's less accessible for the physically handicapped. At this time of the year, if you can travel by car at all, you can get some good fishing off the government wharf at Cowichan Bay.

HOLDINGS NOT MUCH

Victoria city council's three late disclosures of financial holdings — kept under wraps Monday by official adherence to deadlines — were available to anyone interested enough to examine them today.

Under the requirements of the Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act, Ald. Mike Young reports that he has a partnership in the legal firm Straith and Co. and has no land holdings.

'Subtle Threats' Claimed in Certification

Ulla Spech disclosed a series of letters from restaurant employees, sent in the wake of certification 16 months ago, which contained subtle threats.

One of the letters said a waitress was in Parksville when contacted by a fellow worker in Victoria asking her to join the union and saying she might be unemployed if she didn't. "... I was not home, she had the audacity to ask my roommate to sign the application for me."

Another employee said she was told if she didn't sign with the union for $1 it would cost her $50 later. "I feel this is being forced upon the majority of the staff without a fair vote and should be conconsidered," said the employee.

Other letters were in a similar vein, saying the decision was being forced on them and asking for a representation vote.

Spech said the turnover has been such that of the 23 present employees, only six were there when certification was granted.

However, staff are expected to accept a decision of the B.C. Labor Relations Baord which means they will soon be covered by a union contract.

"I have talked to the staff and it seems they now are prepared to accept the decision of the Labor Relations Board," Spech said.

"And I do not think we will appeal the decision. What has bothered us is that we never had a representation election. It was just based on signing cards. I personally don't feel we had a majority vote — maybe on paper but not in reality, not a fair one."

The Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union, Local 835, was certified as bargaining agent after signing what the boat called "a bare majority" of the employees in April of last year.

Later, with a change in management and staff turnover, the new employees petitioned the board to decertify the union.

The board, in a decision made public Monday, decided to withhold a decision on decertification, saying that "there should be time" to give employees an opportunity to see what union representation is like and "only then can the employees make an informed choice as to whether they wish to continue to be represented by the union."

The board gave the employees, the union and the restaurant six weeks in which to come up with a voluntary agreement. Failing that, it will exercise its power under a section of the Labor Code and write a first agreement.

The Labor Relations Board, in its written decision, said all parties in the dispute misunderstand each other's position.

Top Official Shuffled, Pay Cut

A top-level provincial civil service official has been moved to a lower-paying position as part of an internal rearrangement of the provincial lands department.

As part of a shuffle announced Monday by Resources Minister Bob Williams, David Borthwick will take a pay cut of $3,000, to $25,000 a year, as a special adviser to the lands branch.

His replacement as deputy associate minister is Norman Pearson, who will receive $33,000 a year, up from the $22,740 he received as Williams' staff consultant.

Wayne Richards, former publisher of a Kitsilano community newspaper, will take over as staff consultant at $21,516 a year and Stewart Headley, a PNE director and long-time NDP member, will become Williams' administrative assistant at $17,628 a year.

Borthwick said he could not comment on his new position, other than to say he will be doing special work.

The shuffle, he said, is "just part of the re-structuring in the department."

In 1970, John de Wolf, then leader of the provincial Conservative party, charged that Borthwick had a conflict of interest because he was a member of a mining promotion syndicate, which included top officials of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources, involved in the controversy over development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver.

De Wolf said Borthwick signed an agreement on behalf of the government leasing land in the Cypress Bowl area to Alpine, with one of his mining associates signing for the company.

Williams said today the Cypress Bowl controversy "wasn't a factor" in the decision to shift Borthwick.

"We're simply reorganizing the lands branch and the man that is the new associate deputy has a background in the area that's needed in terms of the new direction the department is taking," said Williams.

Asked why Borthwick has received a salary cut, Williams said his new position is a "less demanding job."

Pearson, 36, is a community and regional planner and has worked for the government for two years. He is past president of the Planning Institute of B.C. and former editor of the Town Planning Institute of Canada Newsletter.

Along with the new appointments, Williams announced several "new directions" for the lands service.

He said the service will place greater emphasis on working with other departments in sorting out "conflicting demands and future uses on Crown lands."

New methods of co-ordinating government land purchases will be investigated and a stepped-up program on the use of greenbelt lands, ecological reserves and appropriate Crown lands for recreation, education and research.

The "out-moded and time consuming Crown land leasing process" will be shifted to a new program, said Williams, and there will be greater realization of the development potential of Crown lands.

By late this morning the legislative clerk's office had still not received financial disclosure forms from Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey).

Officials who do not comply with the new disclosures act are subject to summary conviction with a maximum $10,000 fine but Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today he did not want to comment on any action that might be taken against officials who did not meet with Monday's disclosure deadline.

"I would hope that any recording clerk would inform anybody in default and there's probably a reason for these delays," he said.

A spokesman for the clerk's office said McGeer had telephoned this morning to say he had mailed his disclosure Thursday evening in Vancouver.

A disclosure return from NDP MLA Hartley Dent (Skeena), missing earlier, turned up in the mail this morning. Dent's form was marked "nil" holdings to disclose on all five sheets.

Official deadline for filing disclosures was Sept. 15 but officers were accepting disclosures all day Monday the 16th.

Bus, Truck Set Alight In Port Hardy Strike

An old truck and bus blocking entrance to the Utah International copper mine at Port Hardy were burned by arsonists Monday night as the six-week-old strike escalated into violence.

The burning culminated a day of violence on the picket line in which one man was cut in a fight involving three pickets and member of the mine supervisory staff who crossed the line.

The company blockaded the road with the bus and truck when rumors spread that strikers might enter the mine property and try to halt all work.

Pickets blocked both main roads into the mine with about 100 cars today but they were outside company property.

Trouble came to a head Monday when a member of the mine supervisory staff, Dick Robertson, successfully crossed a picket line one mile outside the mine and then was involved in a taunting match with picketers.

Witnesses said a fight broke out and picketer Dan Ludwigson received a three-inch cut.

"There was a lot of punching and kicking," the witness said. "There was blood all over the road."

Ludwigson was treated in hospital and released.

At 2:30 p.m. a cavalcade of 70 cars of workers came to the picket line and blockaded the road, preventing supervisory personnel from leaving by the shorter main road into Port Hardy. They left by a back road.

The employees said they were trying to force the company to resume negotiations. The blockade was removed at 8 p.m. when the company said it would listen to any suggestions from a mediator appointed by the provincial government as to how negotiations could be resumed. The mediator was talking to both sides today but talks had not resumed by noon.

Meanwhile, the company, reacting to rumors that pickets might enter the company property to disrupt work, moved an old bus up against a flatbed two-ton truck to block entrance to the mine.

At 9:15 p.m. a person or persons unknown set fire to the bus and truck, completely gutting the interior of both vehicles, RCMP spokesmen said.

"The fires were deliberately set and we are investigating further," the RCMP office said.

No charges had been laid by noon today.

There was no work at the mine today because both the mine front road and the longer rear road were blocked by workers' cars, the RCMP said.

Dollar value of the bus and truck was said to be negligible as both vehicles were very old. The 40-seat bus was used to transport employees around the mine but was not used frequently.

The bus-truck blockade was set up 200 yards outside the main entrance to the mine. The picket line was another 1,200 yards down the road.

The strike began when 35 members of local 115-C of Office and Technical Employees walked out seeking a first contract with the mine

DOG KILLS RABBITS

Graham Lake arrived home from work Monday to find the mangled bodies of 14 rabbits he had been raising for food strewn around his backyard.

They had been killed by a marauding dog.

His wife said today, had their two young children been in the yard at the time, they too might have been attacked by the dog.

At 8 a.m. a neighbor and her young son reported seeing a large German shepherd dog leaving the driveway of the Lakes' home at 2963 Cedar Hill, one of the rabbits still in his mouth.

"We were in the house at the time," she said, "It was a large black and gold dog. He must have been in a real frenzy.

"Had the children seen him going for the rabbits they would have rushed out to save them and who knows what would have happened them?"

She said two of the rabbits killed were does, one expecting a litter some time next week.

"The others were all ready for the freezer," she said.

Mrs. Lake said she and her husband had been raising rabbits for 10 years, building the cages in the same manner as those that were broken into Monday.

Lake told the Times, "When a dog in the city can get so vicious it's a threat to the city. I'm afraid to let my kids go out in the yard."

Both he and his wife said it was high time the city bylaw on straying dogs was enforced.

She said she had little hope that the dog's owners can be

$1,000 BIKER REWARD

The father of missing Duncan moforcyclist Lothar Doliwa has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the location of his 23-year-old son.

Copper Price Drops

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The price of copper has fallen sharply to about 60 cents a pound, considered to be the break-even level for many British Columbia mines, the Mining Association of B.C. said today.

Copper was selling at 84 cents a pound July 11 and was as high as $1.40 a pound within the last 12 months. It was quoted in the range of 59-61 today.

"This does not mean that a lot of mines will suddenly be closing but it does mean trouble on the horizon if the price goes lower and stays there for an extended period of time," said P. R. Matthew, secretary-manager of the association.

He said B.C. mines generally made good profits during the past 12 months but tough times have returned and there is no prospect of a turnaround for at least a year.

Supply of copper is increasing faster than the demand because of recessions in Europe, North America and Japan and the price likely will be depressed for at least 12 months, he said.

Conditions vary at each mine but the most recent estimate is that a large number of B.C. operations require a price of at least 60 cents a pound to keep up with inflation, pay increased labor costs and for depreciation of plants.

Copper accounts for half of B.C.'s mineral production being worth $500 million in 1973.

Matthew said regardless of the fact mines may be losing money for the rest of the year, they will have to continue to pay a 2.5 per cent provincial production royalty until Dec. 31 and then begin paying a 5 per cent royalty in 1975.

The province also collects a 50 per cent royalty on windfall profits and in practice this means when the price of copper rises above 85 cents a pound. It has been below that level since July 11.

Provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick has suggested he might alter the mine tax formula to encourage new mines to go into production but there would be no relief for existing mines.

Alteration of the formula could take the form of a system whereby the 50 per cent royalty applied on copper priced considerably above 85 cents a pound.

U.S. Senate to Probe Perjury, CIA Chile Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee decided unanimously today to investigate secret disruptive activities by the Central Intelligence Agency in Chile.

Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho), announced the committee decision, saying the study would help determine what course of action to take toward officials who may have perjured themselves in 1973 when they testified that the U.S. had not intervened in Chile against Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The decision came after a Senate staff report recommended that a perjury investigation be initiated against former Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms and accused Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of having "deceived" the Senate foreign relations committee in sworn testimony.

The confidential report, which centres on testimony given by high-ranking officials on U.S. covert intervention in Chile's internal political affairs, also recommends perjury and contempt investigations of three other government witnesses in the Chile inquiry: former assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs Charles E. Meyer, former U.S. ambassador to Chile Edward Korry and William Broe, former chief of the CIA's Latin American division.

The report, submitted to subcommittee chairman Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho,) and Clifford P. Case, (Rep-N.J.), also asks that the record of Kissinger's confir-

Junior Highs Inadequate—Parents

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A majority of parents think junior high schools aren't doing an adequate job, a study of Greater Victoria high schools states.

The study, done by Dr. Christopher Hodgkinson of the University of Victoria, shows 52 per cent of parents surveyed found junior high schools inadequate.

Forty-four per cent of teachers also found junior highs performing inadequately, while 59 per cent of students, and 64 per cent of school administrators thought they were doing a good job.

"Parents are the most dissatisfied of the four groups studied," says Hodgkinson's report.

"Aggrieved parents see the schools as a sort of 'Greater Funland' where all is permitted and permissive.

"There are too many field trips; not enough hard work; not enough homework; teachers are afraid to be strict; there is not enough structure; discipline is poor . . .

"A sizeable proportion of parents are manifestly opposed to what they perceive as modern trends.

"Whether in reaction or from nostalgia they would like to see a revision of the work ethic of yesteryear. At least for their children."

Teachers' main criticism of junior high schools was levelled at elementary schools that supply students to the junior highs, said the report.

"It was felt that . . . students were overprotected and overpromoted. They arrived immature and unable to cope with responsibility and choice until they reached the level of Grade 10.

"The skills of literacy and numeracy were neglected. In short, the buck was passed to the junior secondary school."

Ninety per cent of administrators, 72 per cent of parents and 64 per cent of teachers viewed discipline as a major problem. Most students, 64 per cent, did not.

A sizeable proportion of all four groups thought Grade 10 students should be part of the senior high school, not the junior high.

"Some girls would like Grade 10 moved up since this would improve dating prospects," said the report.

The study found many students were very happy with the school system as it stands, and even appreciative of it.

"Most of them in fact liked things the way they are, they liked the variety of offerings in the curriculum, the teachers, the science courses, the industrial education courses, the general school climate."

ROBERT BONNER IN HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER — Robert Bonner, former B.C. attorney-general was in satisfactory condition in Vancouver General Hospital Monday after undergoing surgery for an undisclosed ailment.

"His condition is fairly serious," his wife said. "How serious is something they are going to find out. He . . . will be in at least a week."

A hospital spokesman said surgery "went fine" and listed Bonner's condition as satisfactory but would give no further information.

No announcement has been made as to whether Bonner will be well enough to pursue his plans to chair a Social Credit Party resolutions seminar at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 26-27.

PARKLAND ENJOYS TASTE OF SUCCESS

Parkland Panthers scratched up their first victory of the season Monday night, ending a long drought in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

Mike Nauss hammered in three consecutive goals to lead Panthers to a 4-2 decision over visiting Esquimalt Dockers and gave the host club its first win since joining the league at the start of last season.

In other matches, Reynolds Roadrunners tripped visiting Belmont Braves 9-0 and Oak Bay took over second place with a 6-1 victory over host Claremont Spartans.

Parkland dropped its first two games this season to last year's playoff finalists — losing by a narrow 4-3 margin to Mt. Douglas and dropping a 7-1 decision to Roadrunners.

The Panthers, with eight goals in three games, have already equalled their output last season, when they lost all 16 encounters and finished with a 8-102 goals-for-and-against record.

Nauss then started off the second half with two goals and clubmate Shane Griffey added an insurance tally.

League-leading scorer Greg Booth hammered in three more goals to give Roadrunners a 7-0 lead at half time and boost his individual total for three games to nine. Drew Finerty added two goals and singles were scored by Jim McHaffie, Keith Bridge, Mike Dominique and Richard Gurney.

Grant Olson powered the Oak Bay squad to victory with a three-goal output while singles were chipped in by Paul Monaghan, Steve Farrell and Ed Jackson. Gordie Horth averted a shutout for Claremont.

Title Battle Delayed Until Late in October

NEW YORK (AP) — The George Foreman-Muhammad Ali heavyweight championship fight, set for Sept. 25 in Kinshasha, Zaire, has been postponed until either Oct. 23 or Oct. 30, the fight promoters announced today.

Hank Schwartz, vice-president of Video Techniques, the fight promoters, said an announcement of the exact date of the fight will be made in several days by the government of Zaire.

Schwartz said Ali and Foreman will remain in Zaire to train for the fight, which had been scheduled for Sept. 25, 6:45 PDT, until Foreman received a cut over his eye on Monday.

"The fight is on," Schwartz said. He called Foreman's eye cut an unfortunate incident which has "put us behind by a month."

KINSHASHA, Zaire (AP) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman's cut eye was described today as deep and serious, and the most favorable prognosis for a resumption of training for his title fight against Muhammad Ali involved two weeks rest.

A source described the gash that led to the postponement of the scheduled Sept. 25 championship fight as more than an inch long.

Three butterfly bandages, a kind of adhesive that binds layers of skin together, were used to close the horizontal gash between Foreman's right eye and eyebrow.

While Foreman rested at his villa today playing cards and walking his dog, his manager Dick Sadler, the fight promoters, a representative of Ali and Zaire officials were working out a statement on how long the postponement will be.

A Zaire government official had promised there would be an official announcement on the status of the fight some time today.

Because of continuing competition of the baseball pennant races and the football season in the United States, there were several problems to resolve in order to assure that the closed-circuit broadcast of the fight, its main revenue source, would be protected.

A group of Zaire doctors visited Foreman today, but the bandages over the injury were not removed.

Ottawa Back Out for Year

Not only are the defending Grey Cup champions mired in the Canadian Football League eastern conference cellar with Toronto Argonauts, they now have lost their premier running back for the remainder of the season.

Jim Evenson had his right knee operated on Sunday for ligament damage suffered in the third quarter of a 16-9 loss to Calgary Stampeders. He had just signed a two-year contract with the club.

The loss left the Riders with only three wins in nine games.

On top of that, general manager Frank Clair reports that Gene Foster, cut by the club last week, will not return to replace Evenson.

And, if that isn't enough, only one of a series of players expected in camp after being cut by various National Football League teams is here.

Just No Rest for Mike

By The Associated Press

Andy Messersmith, the Los Angeles Dodgers' big winner, apparently thinks that one day off for Mike Marshall, the team's ace relief pitcher, is too much. And manager Walt Alston tends to agree.

Although the Dodgers were holding a four-run lead over Houston Astros after seven innings Monday night, Alston brought in his durable right-hander to preserve Messersmith's 18th victory.

"If Mike doesn't pitch, he gets rusty sitting around—and angry," Messersmith quipped after the Dodgers won 7-2 and maintained their 2½-game lead over Cincinnati Reds in the National League West pennant race. "He hadn't worked since Saturday."

The Reds, meanwhile, battered San Diego Padres 9-2 for their seventh victory in eight games. The Dodgers have 15 games remaining and Cincinnati 14.

In other NL games, Montreal Expos and New York Mets split 3-2 decisions in a doubleheader and San Francisco Giants defeated Atlanta Braves 4-2.

Marshall now has appeared in 96 games—four more than the major league record he set last season with Montreal. He has finished 76 games, one short of the major league mark set by Milwaukee's Ken Sanders in 1971. And he is the NL leader in earned run average. Only one other relief pitcher—Hoyt Wilhelm of the old New York Giants in 1952—ever won the ERA crown, finishing with a 2.43 mark.

He alowed ony one baserunner—on a walk. Over the season, he has worked 189 1-3 innings and permitted 173 hits, and has a ratio of 129 strikeouts to only 46 walks.

The Dodgers capitalized on some sloppy Houston play, including four errors, one hit batsman, one wild pitch and one passed ball, for most of their runs. Bill Buckner and Lee Lacy each had two hits and scored twice for Los Angeles.

Cincinnati had 13 hits, including consecutive homers by Dan Driessen and Cesar Geronimo in a four-run third inning, in punishing San Diego. Geronimo, Dave Concepcion and Johnny Bench each drove in two Cincinnati runs. Bench's two RBIs gave him 107 for the season and sole possession of the NL lead.

The Expos tied their club record of eight consecutive victories by winning the opener, overcoming a 2-1 deficit on Ron Woods' two-run single in the seventh inning off Jerry Koosman, 13-10.

In the nightcap, the Mets won behind the four-hit pitching of Randy Sterling and Tug McGraw. Sterling, in his first major league appearance, held the Expos hitless until the sixth when Montreal scored its two runs.

Twins' Manager Returns in '75

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Twins president Calvin Griffith announced Monday he had rehired manager Frank Quilici for the 1975 American League baseball season.

Griffith said he was impressed with the improvement Quilici has shown as manager this year and thinks it reflects the improvement the Twins have shown on the field in recent weeks.

Quilici's job appeared in jeopardy in mid-June when the team fell 14 games below .500.

However, the Twins have won eight of their last nine games and were 16 games above .500 since mid-June and are in third place in the West Division, 8½ games behind first-place Oakland A's going into Monday night's game against Kansas City Royals.

Math Boring, Outdated Say Experts

EDMONTON (CP) — The mathematics curriculum used in high schools is irrelevant, boring and outdated, say two experts who are working at bringing the subject down to earth.

Prof. Alan Madgett and Peter Weygang are conducting an 18-month national survey which they hope will result in the design of a modern, practical high school mathematics curriculum.

Madgett, assistant professor of mathematics at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., and Weygang, head of mathematics at the Levack, Ont. district high school, are interviewing government, industry, business and education department leaders to determine attitudes.

The current survey follows their broad spectrum mathematics project, now three years old, in Ontario which relies heavily on applications in the social sciences, professional areas and industrial fields.

In operation only at Levack, that project compares with the traditional final-year Ontario high school math program "designed primarily for students planningg on careers in mathematics or the physical sciences," Weygang said in an interview.

Madgett said "90 per cent of university mathematics professors can't tell you how much math is used outside the university's doors."

"Mathematics text books 50 years ago were a lot more relevant at that time than today's math books are," Weygang said.

UN WORKLOAD HEAVY

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations General Assembly opens its 29th annual session today with a record number of problems facing a record number of members.

The first day's agenda included the admission of three new members: Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan; Grenada, a former British island colony in the Caribbean; and Guinea-Bissau, the first of Portugal's African colonies to get independence.

Their admission brings the total membership in the world organization to 138. It started with 51 in 1945.

President Ford planned to appear before the assembly Wednesday for the first major foreign-policy speech of his administration. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim told a news conference Monday that "the fact that the president is coming here personally is the best proof of his positive attitude toward our organization."

A record 111 items are on the agenda for the three-month assembly session. Many of them are the result of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the energy crisis, the arms race, worldwide inflation and the widening gap between rich and poor countries.

Waldheim said many of the problems are of unusual international complexity, demanding a global rather than a national approach. But returning to a theme he has sounded often the last month, he said that in the nearly three years he has been secretary-general, the trend has been "not toward better international co-operation but rather a trend back again to nationalism."

He urged governments to show "more give and take" and willingness to "give up some of their selfish interests and be ready to co-operate on an international basis."

He said that failure to do this was "the main reason we failed to achieve a breakthrough" at the UN conferences on the environment, the law of the sea and population problems.

The 28th General Assembly, which started a year ago, adjourned late Monday after meeting for an hour of speeches praising its president, Leopoldo Benites of Ecuador. The assembly had remained in session technically so that it could meet quickly if action on the Arab-Israeli conflict was required.

Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika is to be president of the new assembly. The 37-year-old former revolutionary is the choice of the Asian-African bloc, whose turn it is to nominate the president.

Waste Gas Cut In Water Scare

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency plans to cut drastically the 200 million pounds of vinyl chloride escaping into the air from industrial plants and to determine whether any of the cancer-causing chemical threatens U.S. drinking water supplies.

The agency announced the actions Monday in releasing a report on the vinyl chloride problem. The report was prepared by a task force set up earlier this year following disclosure of several deaths among workers exposed to the chemical at vinyl chloride plants.

The report concluded there is no scientific evidence to indicate air pollution from vinyl chloride plants poses an "imminent hazard to people living near these plants."

But, EPA administrator Russell E. Train told a news conference, "it is clear that some hazard does exist, and that our population deserves the protection afforded by regulatory action."

Train said it would take from nine months to one year to draw up rules designed to cut down such air pollution. The report estimated that emissions from the 15 vinyl chloride plants around the country could be reduced by 90 per cent, with a 75 per cent reduction in the 37 plants where polyvinyl chloride is made. Vinyl chloride is the basic gas, while polyvinyl chloride is the solid form used for an almost endless variety of consumer products.

The EPA said it is still investigating whether it can apply similar rules to the estimated 8,000 plants where polyvinyl chloride is turned into those end products.

To date there have been 25 cases around the world of a rare but fatal form of liver cancer in workers exposed to vinyl chloride. In addition there are several reports of deaths of persons who lived in the vicinity of the plants, though a direct causal connection has not been established.

The report said drinking water supplies should be studied to see if those near vinyl chloride plants are contaminated. Glenn Schweitzer, head of the EPA's office of toxic substances, said the agency has no reason to believe there is currently a hazard in drinking water, but "as a matter of prudence" wants to be sure.

The chemical could be entering water supplies downstream from plants or possibly from polyvinyl chloride liners used inside pipes or tanks carrying drinking water.

Soviets Soft-Peddle Souvenirs

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviets have traditionally tended to wear their pride on their coat lapels, but the custom of issuing pins for every honor, landmark and event seems to be getting out of hand.

Vast sums of money are being wasted on souvenir pins which either celebrate trivia or misrepresent the wearer as a hero, the Communist party newspaper Pravda said Monday.

The issuance of these badges is growing catastrophically," said the article by satirist I. Shatunovsky.

During the last 15 months, 15 million badges — honoring factories and stores, sports events, anniversaries and memorials — were produced at a cost of $4.6 million, the article said, and outlays for 46 million badges of all kinds have already been projected by 99 plants for this year.

"The supply is meeting the demand," Pravda said. "Unless strict control it put on production of these items, the waste will continue to rise."

The article singled out for ridicule the issuance of badges for such events as the annual regional barbers' meeting and the third anniversary of the construction of a water tower.

As an example of wasting expensive metal for a cheap purpose, Pravda told of the award issued by one sanitation workers' union for its "best plumber" — a silver lapel badge in the shape of a toilet seat.

Nunweiler In Japan For Meeting

B.C.'s newest cabinet minister Alf Nunweiler is in Japan today for the opening of the International Conference on Human Environment in Northern Areas.

Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs, is the B.C. representative at the conference in Sapporo and his expenses have been paid by the Hokkaido government.

Industrial Wages Up 1.5%

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings in July were $178.73, up 1.5 per cent from June, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The average is for workers in all industries except agriculture, fishing, trapping, government service, education and domestic service and the July figures are based on early returns of wage surveys.

The July average was 12.3 per cent higher than the average for July, 1973.

The June-to-July gain in the consumer price index was eight-tenths of one per cent and the index was 11.3 per cent higher in July of this year compared with the same month a year ago.

Workers in forestry had the largest percentage gain comparing July and June and miners were the only ones to show a decline.

Averages by industry division and increase over June were: Forestry, $208.77, up 2.2 per cent; mining, $233.67, down two-tenths of one per cent; manufacturing, $183.90, up four-tenths of one per cent; construction, $250.75, up 1.3 per cent; transportation, communication and other utilities, $202.38, up six-tenths of one per cent; trade, $144.66, up 1.8 per cent; finance, insurance and real estate, $175.86, up 1.6 per cent; and service, $129.03, up 1.8 per cent.

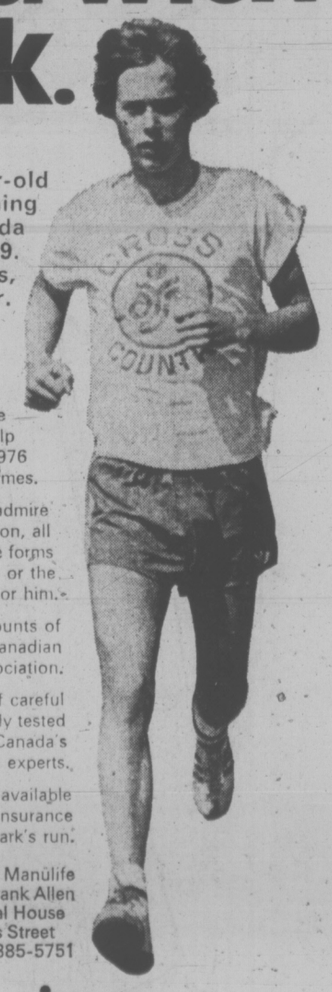
Run across Canada with Mark.



Mark Kent, a 17-year-old Toronto athlete, started running about 4,000 miles across Canada from Victoria, B.C. on June 29. He expects to be in St. John's, Nfld. in October.

He's doing it because it's never been done before. And while he's running, he wants to raise money for the Olympic Trust of Canada, to help Canadian athletes prepare for the 1976 Olympic Games.

Mark's doing the hard part. If you admire his spirit and share his conviction, all you have to do is get mileage pledge forms and ask your friends, neighbors or the people you work with, to sponsor him.

Receipts for tax deductible amounts of $5 or more will be issued by the Canadian Olympic Association.

The mileage pledge forms are available through The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, which is sponsoring Mark's run.

Top Official Shuffled, Pay Cut

A top-level provincial civil service official has been moved to a lower-paying position as part of an internal rearrangement of the provincial lands department.

As part of a shuffle announced Monday by Resources Minister Bob Williams, David Borthwick will take a pay cut of $3,000, to $25,000 a year, as a special adviser to the lands branch.

His replacement as deputy associate minister is Norman Pearson, who will receive $33,000 a year, up from the $22,740 he received as Williams' staff consultant.

Wayne Richards, former publisher of a Kitsilano community newspaper, will take over as staff consultant at $21,516 a year and Stewart Headley, a PNE director and long-time NDP member, will become Williams' administrative assistant at $17,628 a year.

Borthwick said he could not comment on his new position, other than to say he will be doing special work.

The shuffle, he said, is "just part of the re-structuring in the department."

In 1970, John de Wolf, then leader of the provincial Conservative party, charged that Borthwick had a conflict of interest because he was a member of a mining promotion syndicate, which included top officials of Alpine Outdoor Recreation Resources, involved in the controversy over development of Cypress Bowl in West Vancouver.

De Wolf said Borthwick signed an agreement on behalf of the government leasing land in the Cypress Bowl area to Alpine, with one of his mining associates signing for the company.

Williams said today the Cypress Bowl controversy "wasn't a factor" in the decision to shift Borthwick.

"We're simply reorganizing the lands branch and the man that is the new associate deputy has a background in the area that's needed in terms of the new direction the department is taking," said Williams.

Asked why Borthwick has received a salary cut, Williams said his new position is a "less demanding job."

Pearson, 36, is a community and regional planner and has worked for the government for two years. He is past president of the Planning Institute of B.C. and former editor of the Town Planning Institute of Canada Newsletter.

Along with the new appointments, Williams announced several "new directions" for the lands service.

He said the service will place greater emphasis on working with other departments in sorting out "conflicting demands and future uses on Crown lands."

New methods of co-ordinating government land purchases will be investigated and a stepped-up program on the use of greenbelt lands, ecological reserves and appropriate Crown lands for recreation, education and research.

The "out-moded and time consuming Crown land leasing process" will be shifted to a new program, said Williams, and there will be greater realization of the development potential of Crown lands.

By late this morning the legislative clerk's office had still not received financial disclosure forms from Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (Vancouver-Point Grey).

Officials who do not comply with the new disclosures act are subject to summary conviction with a maximum $10,000 fine but Attorney General Alex Macdonald said today he did not want to comment on any action that might be taken against officials who did not meet with Monday's disclosure deadline.

"I would hope that any recording clerk would inform anybody in default and there's probably a reason for these delays," he said.

A spokesman for the clerk's office said McGeer had telephoned this morning to say he had mailed his disclosure Thursday evening in Vancouver.

A disclosure return from NDP MLA Hartley Dent (Skeena), missing earlier, turned up in the mail this morning. Dent's form was marked "nil" holdings to disclose on all five sheets.

Official deadline for filing disclosures was Sept. 15 but officers were accepting disclosures all day Monday the 16th.

Bus, Truck Set Alight In Port Hardy Strike

An old truck and bus blocking entrance to the Utah International copper mine at Port Hardy were burned by arsonists Monday night as the six-week-old strike escalated into violence.

The burning culminated a day of violence on the picket line in which one man was cut in a fight involving three pickets and member of the mine supervisory staff who crossed the line.

The company blockaded the road with the bus and truck when rumors spread that strikers might enter the mine property and try to halt all work.

Pickets blocked both main roads into the mine with about 100 cars today but they were outside company property.

Trouble came to a head Monday when a member of the mine supervisory staff, Dick Robertson, successfully crossed a picket line one mile outside the mine and then was involved in a taunting match with picketers.

Witnesses said a fight broke out and picketer Dan Ludwigson received a three-inch cut.

"There was a lot of punching and kicking," the witness said. "There was blood all over the road."

Ludwigson was treated in hospital and released.

At 2:30 p.m. a cavalcade of 70 cars of workers came to the picket line and blockaded the road, preventing supervisory personnel from leaving by the shorter main road into Port Hardy. They left by a back road.

The employees said they were trying to force the company to resume negotiations. The blockade was removed at 8 p.m. when the company said it would listen to any suggestions from a mediator appointed by the provincial government as to how negotiations could be resumed. The mediator was talking to both sides today but talks had not resumed by noon.

Meanwhile, the company, reacting to rumors that pickets might enter the company property to disrupt work, moved an old bus up against a flatbed two-ton truck to block entrance to the mine.

At 9:15 p.m. a person or persons unknown set fire to the bus and truck, completely gutting the interior of both vehicles, RCMP spokesmen said.

"The fires were deliberately set and we are investigating further," the RCMP office said.

No charges had been laid by noon today.

There was no work at the mine today because both the mine front road and the longer rear road were blocked by workers' cars, the RCMP said.

Dollar value of the bus and truck was said to be negligible as both vehicles were very old. The 40-seat bus was used to transport employees around the mine but was not used frequently.

The bus-truck blockade was set up 200 yards outside the main entrance to the mine. The picket line was another 1,200 yards down the road.

The strike began when 35 members of local 115-C of Office and Technical Employees walked out seeking a first contract with the mine

DOG KILLS RABBITS

Graham Lake arrived home from work Monday to find the mangled bodies of 14 rabbits he had been raising for food strewn around his backyard.

They had been killed by a marauding dog.

His wife said today, had their two young children been in the yard at the time, they too might have been attacked by the dog.

At 8 a.m. a neighbor and her young son reported seeing a large German shepherd dog leaving the driveway of the Lakes' home at 2963 Cedar Hill, one of the rabbits still in his mouth.

"We were in the house at the time," she said, "It was a large black and gold dog. He must have been in a real frenzy.

"Had the children seen him going for the rabbits they would have rushed out to save them and who knows what would have happened them?"

She said two of the rabbits killed were does, one expecting a litter some time next week.

"The others were all ready for the freezer," she said.

Mrs. Lake said she and her husband had been raising rabbits for 10 years, building the cages in the same manner as those that were broken into Monday.

Lake told the Times, "When a dog in the city can get so vicious it's a threat to the city. I'm afraid to let my kids go out in the yard."

Both he and his wife said it was high time the city bylaw on straying dogs was enforced.

She said she had little hope that the dog's owners can be

$1,000 BIKER REWARD

The father of missing Duncan motorcyclist Lothar Doliwa has posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the location of his 23-year-old son.

Lothar was last heard from early July 28 when he apparently drove to his parents' home and then suddenly left.

Copper Price Drops

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The price of copper has fallen sharply to about 60 cents a pound, considered to be the break-even level for many British Columbia mines, the Mining Association of B.C. said today.

Copper was selling at 84 cents a pound July 11 and was as high as $1.40 a pound within the last 12 months. It was quoted in the range of 59-61 today.

"This does not mean that a lot of mines will suddenly be closing but it does mean trouble on the horizon if the price goes lower and stays there for an extended period of time," said P. R. Matthew, secretary-manager of the association.

He said B.C. mines generally made good profits during the past 12 months but tough times have returned and there is no prospect of a turnaround for at least a year.

Supply of copper is increasing faster than the demand because of recessions in Europe, North America and Japan and the price likely will be depressed for at least 12 months, he said.

Conditions vary at each mine but the most recent estimate is that a large number of B.C. operations require a price of at least 60 cents a pound to keep up with inflation, pay increased labor costs and for depreciation of plants.

Copper accounts for half of B.C.'s mineral production being worth $500 million in 1973.

Matthew said regardless of the fact mines may be losing money for the rest of the year, they will have to continue to pay a 2.5 per cent provincial production royalty until Dec. 31 and then begin paying a 5 per cent royalty in 1975.

The province also collects a 50 per cent royalty on windfall profits and in practice this means when the price of copper rises above 85 cents a pound. It has been below that level since July 11.

Provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick has suggested he might alter the mine tax formula to encourage new mines to go into production but there would be no relief for existing mines.

Alteration of the formula could take the form of a system whereby the 50 per cent royalty applied on copper priced considerably above 85 cents a pound.

U.S. Senate to Probe Perjury, CIA Chile Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate foreign relations committee decided unanimously today to investigate secret disruptive activities by the Central Intelligence Agency in Chile.

Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho), announced the committee decision, saying the study would help determine what course of action to take toward officials who may have perjured themselves in 1973 when they testified that the U.S. had not intervened in Chile against Marxist President Salvador Allende.

The decision came after a Senate staff report recommended that a perjury investigation be initiated against former Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms and accused Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of having "deceived" the Senate foreign relations committee in sworn testimony.

The confidential report, which centres on testimony given by high-ranking officials on U.S. covert intervention in Chile's internal political affairs, also recommends perjury and contempt investigations of three other government witnesses in the Chile inquiry: former assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs Charles E. Meyer, former U.S. ambassador to Chile Edward Korry and William Broe, former chief of the CIA's Latin American division.

The report, submitted to subcommittee chairman Sen. Frank Church, (Dem.-Idaho,) and Clifford P. Case, (Rep-N.J.), also asks that the record of Kissinger's confir-

Junior Highs Inadequate—Parents

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A majority of parents think junior high schools aren't doing an adequate job, a study of Greater Victoria high schools states.

The study, done by Dr. Christopher Hodgkinson of the University of Victoria, shows 52 per cent of parents surveyed found junior high schools inadequate.

Forty-four per cent of teachers also found junior highs performing inadequately, while 59 per cent of students and 64 per cent of school administrators thought they were doing a good job.

"Parents are the most dissatisfied of the four groups studied," says Hodgkinson's report.

"Aggrieved parents see the schools as a sort of 'Greater Funland' where all is permitted and permissive.

"There are too many field trips; not enough hard work; not enough homework; teachers are afraid to be strict; there is not enough structure; discipline is poor . . .

"A sizeable proportion of parents are manifestly opposed to what they perceive as modern trends.

"Whether in reaction or from nostalgia they would like to see a revision of the work ethic of yesteryear. At least for their children."

Teachers' main criticism of junior high schools was levelled at elementary schools that supply students to the junior highs, said the report.

"It was felt that . . . students were overprotected and overpromoted. They arrived immature and unable to cope with responsibility and choice until they reached the level of Grade 10.

"The skills of literacy and numeracy were neglected. In short, the buck was passed to the junior secondary school."

Ninety per cent of administrators, 72 per cent of parents and 64 per cent of teachers viewed discipline as a major problem. Most students, 64 per cent, did not.

A sizeable proportion of all four groups thought Grade 10 students should be part of the senior high school, not the junior high.

"Some girls would like Grade 10 moved up since this would improve dating prospects," said the report.

The study found many students were very happy with the school system as it stands, and even appreciative of it.

"Most of them in fact liked things the way they are, they liked the variety of offerings in the curriculum, the teachers, the science courses, the industrial education courses, the general school climate."

ROBERT BONNER IN HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER — Robert Bonner, former B.C. attorney-general was in satisfactory condition in Vancouver General Hospital Monday after undergoing surgery for an undisclosed ailment.

"His condition is fairly serious," his wife said. "How serious is something they are going to find out. He . . . will be in at least a week."

A hospital spokesman said surgery "went fine" and listed Bonner's condition as satisfactory but would give no further information.

No announcement has been made as to whether Bonner will be well enough to pursue his plans to chair a Social Credit Party resolutions seminar at Harrison Hot Springs Sept. 26-27.
